

No revolt of the masses will long suppress the intense introspectiveness of all our sciences and arts. Only a destruction of Nordic ectomorphs can accomplish that. The charge that I am making, that conservatives are at the bottom antimodern and hence anti-Nordic, is grave. There is a dilemma, to be sure, that our society has outrun its present genetic ability to get along in a postmodern world (though some, like myself, think it is not nearly postmodern enough). The obvious solution, to breed more Nordics, may result in the dilemma appearing all over again at a higher level. One synthesis appears to be on the way, that of a new evolutionary ethics. Raymond B. Cattell has made a major beginning in A New Morality from Science: Beyondism. (Isn't it significant that Herbert Spencer called his life work "synthetic philosophy"?) But a full solution to the dilemma calls for an approach combining the biological and social dimensions. Conservative moaning won't do.

The Irish Trouble Comes to Santa Rosa

The city of Santa Rosa, California, recently became the unlikely focus of a campaign of subversive intimidation. About a year ago the city fathers wrote to the International Sister Cities Organization asking to be "twinned" with an "English-speaking" city of about the same size and situation. A short time later the city council was informed that Santa Rosa had been twinned with Craigavon in County Armagh, Northern Ireland. The councillors of Craigavon took the twinning a little more enthusiastically than their American counterparts. They decided to organize a trip to California for the city's dignitaries, so that proper contacts could be made. All went according to plan until a few months ago when a group in San Francisco called the Irish National Caucus decided to get into the act.

The Irish National Caucus, an organization which supports the aims of the IRA, has from time to time been under Congressional investigation in Washington. The INC wishes to see the overthrow of democratic majority rule in Northern Ireland and the forcible amalgamation of Northern with Southern Ireland. It has organized several anti-British demonstrations in this country, including one that ended up in a riot when demonstrators attacked Americans visiting Royal Navy ships in San Francisco.

The INC did not approve of the visit of the Craigavon councillors on the grounds it would be tantamount to recognizing the existence of majority government in Northern Ireland. An INC delegation from San Francisco paid a visit to the mayor in Santa Rosa (30 miles away) and made it quite clear that, if the Craigavon councillors did visit the city on their goodwill mission, there would be vigorous demonstrations all along their way.

One of the delegates, Father Sean O'Hara, pointed out that a previous confrontation in Santa Rosa between the American Nazi party and Communists had cost the city $40,000 in extra police pay. Certainly the city fathers could not afford another round of such expenses. To make the cheese more binding, a smart young San Francisco attorney by the name of Michael McDermott chimed in that the Craigavon council discriminated against Catholics.

Santa Rosa Mayor Jack Healy -- of Irish extraction himself -- quickly gave in to what he himself later described as "intimidation." So did the city council.

When he was informed of the cancellation Craigavon Mayor Alan Locke made several transatlantic phone calls to try to persuade the Santa Rosans to change their minds. Craigavon had gone to great trouble to prepare for the trip. Several gifts of an official nature had been collected, among them a set of Tyrone crystal engraved with the two cities' emblems and the Craigavon city motto, "Together We Progress." When all his efforts failed, Mayor Locke described the outcome as "most unfortunate." "It shows," he ruefully concluded, "what we in Ulster are up against when we part-time politicians are confronted by American professionals in propaganda."

The capitulation was also condemned by mainstream republican (Catholic) circles in Ulster. Republican members of the Craigavon city council joined in a unanimous council vote expressing regret and disappointment at the outcome. No one in California had bothered to contact the Craigavon republicans for their views, but had just assumed that the extremist Irish National Caucus was their bona fide representative. No one had pointed out that the Ulster delegation would have included republican representation, in the person of the Catholic deputy mayor of Craigavon.

Mr. Brendan Moran, the consul of the Republic of Ireland in San Francisco, also condemned the snub. He stated that the visit

Some Background

The Republic of Ireland, also known as Eire or Southern Ireland, has a population of 3.2 million. As the recent mass outpouring for the Pope demonstrated, Ireland is the most Catholic country in the world. Divorce, contraception and abortion are illegal and Irish scissors work busily on doubtful books, films and TV shows.

The northeast part of the island is called Northern Ireland or, less accurately, Ulster and is part of the United Kingdom. Like England, Scotland and Wales, it elects MPs to the parliament in London. Until 1973 Northern Ireland also had its own provincial parliament for local affairs. No more. Today the country is ruled by representatives of the British government.

Northern Ireland's population of 1,537,000 is about two-thirds Protestant and one-third Catholic. The Protestants regard themselves as British (since their ancestors originally came from the mainland) and generally wish to remain within the United Kingdom. That is why they are called Unionists or Loyalists.

The Catholics regard themselves as Irish and generally wish to break off the union with Britain and unite with Southern Ireland to create an all-island Irish republic. Hence they are described as Republicans.

The Protestant Unionists do not wish to be drawn into an all-Ireland republic, since they would then cease to be a majority and become a minority. Inevitably their culture would be altered by Catholicism and Irish nationalism.

For the past ten years Northern Ireland has been subjected to the terroristic forays of the Irish Republican Army. The IRA (no connection with the regular Irish Army in the south) seeks to reunite Ireland by force against the wishes of the Northern Ireland majority. British troops were sent onto the streets in 1969 to maintain order and have been dying there ever since.

"would have been beneficial" and that "the delegation would have been made up of both communities in Northern Ireland." The Irish National Caucus, he said, was a discredited organization and "a front for the IRA."

High Irish-American politicians like Tip O'Neill, Pat Moynihan, Hugh Carey and Edward Kennedy have traveled to Britain or Ireland and made known their desire to have a united Ireland. The British press and Ulster officials have severely criticized this meddling, particularly after Moynihan went on BBC and announced that America will not be "endlessly patient" about the issue. This could only be interpreted as a pat on the back for the IRA and its assassination teams and supermarket bombing squads.

Instauration has no great regrets about the passing of Admiral Louis Mountbatten, the first close relative of British royalty to marry a Jewess and the man who did almost as much as Churchill to hasten the dissolution of the British Empire. But to murder an old lady and a young grandson along with him is quite as loathsome as it is cowardly and emetic.

Symbolic Hate

A nation with pride does not go where it is not wanted. Or if it does, it goes with enough strength to protect its emissaries from the wrath of an unfriendly populace.

The American Embassy in Tehran had already been occupied at the outbreak of the Iranian revolution last spring (two Marines wounded, American ambassador seized, personnel taken hostage). But President Carter, who lets domestic politics and hypocritical and selective humanitarianism govern his handling of international affairs, didn't seem to get the message. Instead of reducing the embassy staff to one or two death-wishing Davy Crocketts or beefing it up into a fortress with an aircraft carrier lurking in the Persian Gulf ready to level the Ayatullah's holy city of Qum the moment the hair of one American head was ruffled by Tehran street mobs, Jimmy the Tooth let in the Shah, who is more abhorrent to Iranians than Dr. Mengele is to Israelis. It was as undiplomatic an act as introducing a truckload of whiskey into a reservation full of parched Indians on the warpath.

Once again the U.S. has been humiliated on the world stage. Once again American lives have been put on the line because of the cretinous and quavering leadership of the toothsome truckler from Plains. Once again America's asinine diplomacy in the Middle East brings it closer to another sure-lose war.

The Ayatullah would have been happy in 17th-century New England. He is a Cotton Mather figure who would have felt right at home presiding over the Salem witch trials. His personal and ideological survival in the internationalist, permissive, corrupt, conglomerate-dominated, high-technological late 20th century is going to be a problem. But it should be his problem, and his country's problem, not ours.

His hatred for America and the Shah is more symbolic than physical. He is against pornography, gambling, smoking, drugs, financial speculation, crime, feminism, modern art, see-through blouses and all the rest. The United States, although a sizeable segment of its population would approve the Ayatullah's Puritan morality, is nevertheless perceived by him as the wellspring of worldliness, hedonism and materialism, and is therefore number one on his enemy list. The Shah is number two because he, as the mullahs might phrase it, introduced the snake (the U.S.) into the Garden of Eden, after which he and his numerous progeny and relations, according to figures provided by Walter Cronkite, milked Iran of $25 billion. Since in spite of the oceans of oil the inhabitants of the Garden of Eden have a hideously low annual income, the looting hurt.

In regard to enemies, the Ayatullah has a short memory. The British and Russian armies invaded and occupied the country in World War II, and the government had difficulty getting rid of the Russians when the conflict ended. Both the British and the Shah fled Iran in the early 50s during the nationalist government of Prime Minister Mossadegh, a secular version of the Ayatullah, who was removed from office by a joint coup of the Shah, the army, some street mobs and the CIA. The Shah, the son of an army colonel who practiced instant royalty by proclaiming himself the Shah, returned to glory. Mossadegh was tried for treason by the victorious traitors. In a sense the ongoing Iranian revolution is a massive act of vengeance for what was done to Mossadegh, who was treated by the Western press exactly as the Ayatullah is treated today.

Internationalism works against speciation, which can be described as developing the dissimilarities and reducing the similarities among nations and peoples. The greater the differences, the greater the chances of producing a new species, one of which in time may present the universe with a biological artifact greater and more wondrous than man. The Ayatullah wants an Iranian Iran, not a Westernized Iran, and for that he must be commended. He cannot be commended, however, for playing games, affirmative action games, with American lives, and the blame must fall heavily on him -- and on Carter -- if the game gets out of hand. The Ayatullah is also working against the success of his own revolutionary cause by his slipshod policy of internal chaos and his blinkered bearding of a superpower.

The U.S. no longer has much will to fight anywhere or anything, but the American media (because the Ayatullah is pro-PLO) can easily whip up enough fury against him to unleash sufficient non-nuclear weaponry to waste one or more large sections of Iran.

Let not a hundred but a thousand flowers grow -- a thousand races, nations, regions, provinces. But let no flower hide the sun from another, or take the water of another, or engage in the shabby practice of using minority seeds as part-time and Majority seeds as full-time hostages.

The Decimation of Southern Lebanon

Last August Lebanese prime minister Selim Hoss could not put up with Washington's hypocrisy any longer and let fly a cloud of verbal barbs after State Department spokesman Tom Reston, the son of the New York Times pundit James Reston, said the U.S. "did not know if the Israeli war planes devastating Lebanon were American."

Hoss asked:

Does the American spokesman expect to convince us that Israel's military capability, being used to pound populated areas mercilessly and daily, is not provided by the United States, despite all the American economic and military aid Israel is receiving?

Moral Americans, if there are any left, might wonder what on earth American warplanes are doing pulverizing a totally defenseless little country 5,000 miles away.

It's a question that some day all Americans may have to answer before the bar of history -- a difficult assignment since there is no answer, no excuse, no reasonable explanation. The only extenuating circumstances are ignorance, the cowardice of our leaders and the unstoppable power of Jewish racism. But history will not listen to such palpably groundless exculpations -- and the big, heavy, black blot on the American record will remain forever.

One of the great crimes of modern history has occurred in recent months in Lebanon. Much of the entire southern part of the country was depopulated by Israeli military forces using made-in-America heavy artillery, warplanes, antipersonnel bombs, phosphorus shells (when they hit the flesh they burn right through to the bone) and other military horrors. Estimates of the number of homeless or migrant Lebanese go as high as 600,000. This is no doctored NBC Holocaust. This is the real thing and can be easily verified by anyone with the price of an airline ticket.

What are our church leaders saying? Next to nothing, although tens of thousands of Lebanese refugees are -- or were before they were killed by the gallant Israelis -- Christians. What is Jimmy Carter, the noble Galahad of the human rights movement, doing about this? He is authorizing the shipment of more planes, more antipersonnel bombs and more phosphorus shells to Israel.

While the silence from Washington remains deafening, even British liberals are finally speaking out. Christopher Bourne writes in the New Statesman (Aug. 3, 1979):

Village of Damour after an Israeli air attack

Thousands of people are now on the move northwards to Beirut and in all two hundred thousand have been displaced by what is simply a campaign of military terror conducted against them by the Israeli army, navy and airforce...People are being bombed, rocketed, shelled and shot all over south Lebanon but their sufferings have been almost entirely ignored...

The Sunday before last was beautiful and sunny in Lebanon as indeed it always is at this time of the year. The picknickers come out in their thousands and not surprisingly it was holidaymakers who were the largest component of the mixed bag the Israeli airforce collected that day when they bombed and strafed the beach areas south of Sidon in their never ending hunt for Palestinian "terrorists." As far as I know, they did kill two or three guerrillas -- the rest of the sixteen killed and most of the sixty-five injured were Lebanese picknickers and refugees moving away from the shelling further south...the end result is that south Lebanon is becoming a fragrant wasteland of ruined and deserted houses standing amid the now untended but laden orange groves. My Palestinian friends say the Israelis are using their classic tactics first seen in Palestine of frightening away the Arab population before moving in to claim land they say has been "abandoned" by its owners...only one government could put some sort of a rein on the Israelis, but the Americans just don't have the nerve to muzzle their little tigers...

The Israelis in fact seem to have the same attitude towards the Arabs of south Lebanon as Hopalong Cassidy did towards Indians -- namely that the only good ones are dead ones.

The Cultural Catacombs

Kissinger Remembers

The White House Years of Heinz Kissinger (Little Brown, $22.50) contains very little that is new. Basically it is just another attempt, successful no doubt, of government officials to turn their job experiences into hard cash. Most of the Nixon coterie went to jail, to oblivion or to born-again Christianity. Kissinger, who was as guilty as any, if any were guilty, was protected by his race and birth from the obloquy and persecution heaped upon Majority Nixonites. That he was the darling of Nelson Rockefeller, NBC and Time, Inc. did nothing to impinge on his sanctified inviolability.

One item in Kissinger's million-dollar reminiscences stands head and shoulders above the transient diplomatic trivia. Kissinger is talking to Soviet Ambassador Dobrynin during one of the Vietnam crises and asking him how the Kremlin would react if the 15,000 Soviet soldiers then in Egypt were in danger of being captured by the Israelis. Dobrynin is credited with the following reply:

First of all, we never put forces somewhere who can't defend themselves. Second, if the Israelis threaten us, we will wipe them out within two days. I can assure you our plans are made for this eventuality.

Anatoly Dobrynin

As his career and his memoirs amply demonstrate, Kissinger can hand it out but cannot take it. After a television interview with David Frost, carefully timed to publicize his book, he demanded the right to edit what he had said before it went on the air. Charging a breach of "fundamental journalistic ethics," Frost quit. So Americans will be given a sanitized interview instead of the real thing. No network would even give a president such a privilege. But Kissinger, as always, is above the rules.

The man responsible for acquiescing to Henry's unique demands was the new president of NBC-TV News, Bill Small, whose Orthodox Jewish father owned a bakery in Chicago. Brother Mort is president of Television and Radio Features, Inc., a Chicago communications firm. Sister Florence runs Penthouse Productions, which is tied in with the porno magazine of the same name.

Welfare Capitalism

The Congressional Budget Office released a study which revealed more of the causes of the Chrysler Corporation's troubles than have previously met the eye.

Chrysler is unique in that most of its productive capacity resides in the city of Detroit. The other [auto] companies have for many years moved capacity [plants] away from Detroit. GM and Ford have relatively little production capacity [plant location] within range of many Chrysler workers, so even if they were capable of employing these workers, such employment would require worker relocation...Other auto companies would certainly have little use for Chrysler's facilities...These facilities are old, inefficient in their spatial layout, limited in their potential for expansion and located in areas known to have some of the most inefficient and troublesome work forces available...It need not be emphasized that the unemployment rate among minority workers is higher now, and would soar under Chrysler shutdown conditions.

The saving of Chrysler is as much of a racial bailout as it is a financial one.

True to Form

The Random House College Dictionary (1975) contains these definitions:

Kike: Offensive. A person of Jewish religion or descent.

Yid: Offensive. A Jew.

Nigger: Offensive and disparaging. 1. A Negro 2. A member of any dark-skinned race.

Honky: Disparaging. A white man: used esp. by blacks.

Redneck: Disparaging. An uneducated, white farm laborer.

The Random House Dictionary, a condensed paperback version of the Random

House College Dictionary, claims to be "The first nonsexist dictionary," Jess Stein, editor in chief, states in the preface:

Throughout this book we have tried to free our definitions of sexism, racism, and other prejudices. We believe that we have done so more thoroughly than ever before in lexicographic history.

Stein's dictionary only partly lived up to its promise. It dropped only three of the five racial slurs listed earlier, retaining Redneck and Honky. Apparently by retaining slurs against the Majority, Stein believes that he has freed his dictionary of "racism."

Moreover, it is interesting to note that in the definitions contained in the larger Random House College Dictionary, racial slurs against Jews are termed "offensive" and the slur against Negroes is considered "offensive and disparaging." Antiwhite slurs, on the other hand, are only "disparaging."

Frozen Immortality

Those who don't believe in heaven, hell or nirvana, need not feel too pessimistic about immortality. Given the proper care and with some luck, your genes can go on forever, even (provided we make it into deep space in time) after the sun blows up and fizzles out.

There is immortality in your offspring and their descendants. But what if you are childless, as all too many good couples are today? No problem. Your genes, although more diluted, will live on in the posterity of your nephews and nieces, or your second, third or fourth cousins.

If the worst happens, if your entire extended family line should become extinct, there is still your race, still enough people who pack enough of your genes or similar genes to resemble you in skin color, eye color, hair color, head shape -- and much more important -- resemble you in character, intelligence and creativity.

But -- here's the horrible rub -- suppose your race dies out? Then, sadly, you've just about had it. There is not much immortality (for you) in the few miscegenated genes of some old Yankee overseer or some old Southern planter that are still floating around in the offspring of Andy Young.

All, however, is not lost. Not quite. Don't forget that newfangled refrigerator called the sperm bank.

Let some sperm samples be obtained from a few hundred of the purer-than-pure Nordics who are still around on a remote sheep ranch in Australia, on an Iowa farm, in a turreted British castle, or in a rustic hut in some Norwegian valley. Then in a thousand years when all the Nordics are gone, pure and impure, and all the earth is dark-skinned, let one hundred black or brown females be artificially impregnated with the stuff of Nordic (your) immortality. Then after a decent 20-year interval let their 50% Nordic female offspring be impregnated again with some more thawed-out samples. Now we've got some 75% Nordics resurrected almost miraculously from the racial graveyard. Repeat the process for a few more generations and the crop of new Nordics can propagate and propagate until the great race is again back on its feet.

Now, readers, please don't write in and ask questions. Study the problem. Do some research. Ponder. Then think about what is in your own kitchen or garage.

Immortality is no further away than your own deep freeze.

The 10,000-Year-Old Earth

The Institution for Creation Research is going great guns. Its technical and advisory staff boasts "twenty-one scientists," among whom are: Dr. Harold R. Henry, chairman of the department of civil and mining engineering of the University of Alabama; Dr. Duane T. Gish, a UCLA biochemist; Dr. Kenneth B. Cumming, a biologist with degrees from Tufts and Harvard, and formerly chief of program operations in the Federal Office of Biological Services; Dr. Edward Blick, professor of aerospace, mechanical and nuclear engineering at the University of Oklahoma; Dr. Charles W. Harrison, a Harvard Ph.D. in electrical engineering.

All of these scientists believe that the earth was created 10,000 years ago and that Darwin was a liar. If people with advanced degrees can think like this, what about our poor, ignorant, unwashed Joe Blows? Well, Mr. and Mrs. Joe Blow are showing their own level of intelligence by preparing to vote for Senator Fat Face for president.

Second Thoughts

James D. Watson shared a Nobel prize for medicine with two other scientists in 1962 for the discovery of the double helix, one of the great milestones in genetic research. After writing a fascinating but snippy book about the matter, he was solemnly anointed as a "good ole liberal" by the establishment and henceforth could be counted on to contribute money or lend his prestige to every bleeding-heart organization or do-gooding cause. Now, to his despair, Watson has found that the financial support he has been giving to various save-the-environment groups is being used to lobby against genetic experiments involving the recombination of DNA, his very own specialty. This is equivalent to an antivivisectionist learning that he has been subsidizing the operations of a slaughterhouse.

So years after the harm has been done, Watson has finally bestirred himself to write a newspaper article against his former minority friends in the "noisy" Boston Science for the People group and against those he describes as "disgruntled, long-out-of-productive science biochemists, who use any opportunity to say bad things about how the effects of modern science are carried out."

After explaining that DNA is safer than such D's as "daggers, or dynamite, or dogs, or dieldrin, or dioxin, or drinking drivers," and that laboratory-made DNA won't "lead to the extinction of the human race," Watson asks:

If what they say about DNA is nonsense, do we have any compelling reason to listen to them when they come out against pesticides that give us shiny apples or tell us that the waters of the Mississippi are likely to give us cancer? I would like someone to set me right on such matters, but whom to trust now is not that clear.

James D. Watson

A somewhat similar story of a belated change of heart concerns a 37-year-old geneticist named John Stewart. He was so overwhelmed -- and so convinced -- by the media attack on genetic research that he quit his laboratory and went to live in France. Eventually, he ran into a psychiatrist who didn't offer to cure him, but asked for help in identifying the gene for schizophrenia. Stewart was scornful. He was a leftist, and the left had long ago decided that a gene for schizophrenia did not exist. But then he decided that that was not good enough -- he would use his knowledge of genetics to prove there was no such gene. The trouble was that as he dug further into the problem it appeared more and more probable, even certain, that such a gene did in fact exist. At last report Stewart is undergoing a period of political and scientific "reassessment."

Gay News Beat

We have come here for the Sabbath for rest, not only from breadwinning, but also, for some of us, from the effort of appearing straight in a straight world, to rest from the effort of pretending to be what we are not.

These words opened the service at a recent Friday night gathering in San Francisco's gay synagogue, Sha'ar Zahav, whose rabbi is Allen Bennett, 33, a full-fledged gay and the first known homosexual to head a Jewish congregation (100 strong). Bennett has been warmly commended by Rabbi Malcolm Sparer, president of the Board of Rabbis of Northern California. Sometimes the service at Sha'ar Zahav is led by a lesbian, such as Laurie Radovsky, who favors this special prayer:

O God, remember today our gay sisters and brothers who were martyred in years past: those who were burned at the stake in the Middle Ages, as well as those who perished in the Holocaust.

Harrison J. Goldin, New York City Comptroller, said "it might make sense -- dollars and sense --" to feature the Big Apple's gay community as a tourist attraction in an upcoming promotional campaign. He explained he did not mean people should come to "gawk at the gays." He merely recommended that New York should roll out the welcome mat for visiting homosexuals who are attracted to the city's own large pansy population.

Margaret Sanger -- Pioneer Engenicist

Womens' libbers and abortion boosters have made Margaret Sanger, who was indicted way back in 1915 for sending contraceptive information through the mail, one of their patron saints for her early advocacy of birth control. What these same libbers never say is that Margaret Sanger was also in favor of barring entry into the U.S. of "certain aliens whose condition is known to be detrimental to the stamina of the race." Calling for the sterilization and segregation of "already tainted" citizens, Mrs. Sanger in her unceasing efforts in behalf of a biologically "pure" nation promulgated the now carefully forgotten slogan, "Birth Control -- to create a race of thoroughbreds."

Big John

Does John Connally, the recipient of a Lee Harvey Oswald bullet, genuinely want to be president? If he does, the ex-Democratic governor of Texas and ex-Republican Secretary of the Treasury must know something no other politician knows. However he may try to interpret it, his nine-point plan for the Middle East is certainly going to make him the "anti-Semitic" candidate for the big house on Pennsylvania Avenue. The mere suggestion that the West Bank be handed back to the Palestinians in return for stable Arab oil prices is called linkage, a fearful obscenity in most American political circles. It intimates that U.S. support for Israel has something to do with America's oil problems, which is the truth, but an unutterable truth. Knowing that repetition is the gravedigger of fact, the media keep insisting that Israel has nothing to do with our oil problem; which is the second biggest lie of the century.

John Connally

It took a lot of political backbone for Connally to say what he did. It was courage of a brand not evinced by any other serious presidential candidate since the Middle East was first thrown into permanent disequilibrium by the star-crossed birth of Israel.

Connally's Jewish advisors -- every candidate is obliged to have a raft of them -- lost no time in pulling out of his campaign (only a few remained so the B'nai B'rith would not lose all contact). On schedule and to polish their media image, Howard Baker and Robert Dole leaped to the microphone to charge Connally with selling out Israel for black gold. What is worse, Connally had not bothered to "launder" his speech in advance with Jewish leaders -- the routine and obligatory practice of all other candidates to public office when they delve into matters affecting Israel. It was not surprising that the Manhattan GOP cancelled his invitation to speak at its annual Lincoln Day dinner.

Big John comes from Texas which is the habitat of a lot of oil money. Since oil is the industry hardest hit by the Arab-Israeli conflict and since the Carter administration favors oilless Egypt and Israel over oil-rich Libya, Iraq, Iran and Saudi Arabia, the desperate petroleum magnates may have decided to back Connally come hell, high water and accusations of anti-Semitism. Also, Connally may have a personal motive. It was one of his former Jewish associates that fingered him on a milk-fixing charge that stemmed from the Nixon years. Big John was eventually pronounced innocent by a jury comprised of more than a few blacks.

It will be interesting to see how Connally fares in 1980. Will he backtrack and crawl to win the forgiveness he will never get? Or will he stick to his guns and go down to defeat with his flags flying? Or miracle of miracles, will Republican Majority politicians finally scrape up enough courage to rally round and nominate a man who at least pretends -- as of now -- to put Majority interests first, not second?

Swinish Prof

John Buettner-Janush, chairman of the anthropology department of New York University, wrote in his widely used college textbook Physical Anthropology: A Perspective:

Terms such as Negroid, Caucasoid, Congoid and Mongoloid are not valid scientific terms, and color terms such as red, white, black, and yellow are not useful for purposes of biological classification. I have come to prefer the use of the term swine-pink, a most precise and descriptive term for those who are generally called white.

To use the professor's buzz word in a different context, it is quite a swinish trick to run down your own race in order to curry favor with minority racists. Recently, however, Buettner-Janush (his father was a Janush; his mother a Buettner) outdid himself. The internationally known anthropologist and fervid disciple of Franz Boas was arrested for turning his campus laboratory into a drug factory. He had managed to keep his overhead low by using student labor to manufacture his drugs and he charged his supplies to the university. His products included "synthesized cocaine," a variety of quaalude and LSD.

The professor, who posted a $50,000 bond, is an associate editor of the American Journal of Physical Anthropology.

Other drug news: Mark Bernstein, with some help from the Associated Press, claims to be making a fortune with a new drug called Zoom. It is supposed to lift you up while it lets your appetite down. Health food stores say they can't stock enough of it. Although its users swear it has a kick like cocaine, Bernstein claims it is all perfectly legal, since its principal ingredient, guarana powder, is derived from a Brazilian vine.

Marijuana is the favorite drug of Paul Halvonik, a California Court of Appeals Justice. Police, while checking a robbery at the judge's home, saw some curious long-leaved plants in boxes on his balcony. Later they found some cocaine in Mrs. Halvonik's desk. Because Halvonik was a long-time American Civil Liberties Union counsel and a long-time friend and advisor of Gov. Jerry Brown, he and his wife, as Time put it, "were spared the humiliation of booking, fingerprinting and mug-shooting."

War Scenario

The great fear of 1980 is the possibility that to save his presidency Carter will plunge America into a military crusade in the Middle East. This is no idle fancy, as was proved by a recent article in The Washingtonian magazine by Tad Szulc, a fire-exhaling Zionist and former foreign correspondent of the New York Times.

Szulc has actually written a detailed and graphic opening scenario for a U.S. military invasion of what Zbigniew Brzezinski calls the "Crescent of Crisis," complete with names, dates, times and incidents. Szulc's war is triggered by the sinking of three oil tankers in the Strait of Hormuz after striking magnetic mines planted by "Arab radicals." By midnight Carter was ordering detachments of America's armed forces into action. The area was quickly swept of mines and beachheads were secured on both sides of the strait. The next day a group of Marines were hit by Soviet missiles. The war was on!

Within a week the U.S. Navy had reopened the Strait of Hormuz and tankers were again pouring through. Marines were left to occupy several strategic islands, as American warships patrolled the Persian Gulf. Then a few months later "Arab guerrillas" destroyed the huge Abadan refineries in Iran. In retaliation Carter ordered a "limited" military operation in Iran. Szulc leaves us with bombs, shells and grenades flying in all directions.

In his effort to demonstrate how easily we can take over the oil reserves of the Middle East, Szulc neglects to inform his readers that the Arab states -- radical, moderate or conservative -- have all hinted or promised they would reduce the price of oil and raise production for the U.S. if Carter would force the Israelis to give the Palestinians a West Bank homeland. But this simple solution, which might eventually save a million American lives and $100 billion, does not have the imprimatur of Menahem Begin. So it's no dice.

Youngian Fallout

The black-Jewish feud that erupted with the forced resignation of Andrew Young has simmered down as predicted. There were some minor flareups and backfires -- the usual aftermath of any political explosion. Of the sparks that flew from the dying embers these were worth noting:

1. The day that Begin refused to receive the peripatetic Jesse Jackson was the very same day he granted an audience to the peripatetic Elizabeth Taylor, who was on her fifth pilgrimage to Israel.

2. William Raspberry, the black pundit, insinuated that pro-Jewish blacks, especially Vernon Jordan of the Urban League (to which Jews contribute more money than Negroes), were "doing it for the money," a way of saying that Jordan's stentorian attack on Jackson was an attempt to keep the Urban League's financial base intact. Later, in another column, Raspberry asked both blacks and Jews to stop calling each other bigots.

3. A distraught feuilletonist named Richard Cohen wrote a column for the Washington Post which blazoned the headline, ANTI-SEMITISM EXPANDING IN THE U.S. LIKE AN EPIDEMIC.

4. The State Department apologized for permitting a PLO member to enter the country. The "mistake" was blamed on the U.S. Embassy in Jordan.

5. The New Republic, which has praised Rev. Jesse Jackson in the past, let loose a series of diatribes against him that in respect to tone and style reminded readers of the blistering articles the liberal-Zionist organ usually reserves for Dr. Mengele and Arthur Jensen.

6. Jewish groups across the country, together with their White House agents, Stuart Eizenstat and Edward Sanders, asked (commanded?) the president to state in his speech at Emory University that Jews had not forced Young's ouster. Carter said nary a word on the subject. This was most upsetting.

7. Time magazine, only a few weeks after the Young affair, came out with a full-page favorable review of Arthur Jensen's new book Bias in Mental Testing, which neatly demolishes the liberal-Marxist-environmentalist argument that IQ tests are culturally biased against blacks. About the same time it was rumored that movie rights to Camp of the Saints had been sold to a group of Hollywoodites. These two unexpected events impel conspiracy buffs to ask if Jews are sending a message to blacks.

8. Black leaders who visited and hugged Yassir Arafat last fall have blood-curdling tales to tell about what happened when they returned home. Jesse Jackson, full of angst, said, "People [are] placing the heads of dead animals at our door." Joseph Lowery, president of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, declared he and his organization have been targets of economic intimidation -- mainly attempts by Jews to call in bank loans. Other blacks, he announced more ominously, have received death threats.

The ADL Under Oath

The Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith has long been considered untouchable. It harasses, spies upon, sues, threatens, slanders and persecutes Majority members, but somehow the victims never fight back. No more. Liberty Lobby has taken the ADL to court on a six-million dollar damage suit, which charges that the Jewish organization intimidated the Mutual Broadcasting System to the point where the radio network cancelled Liberty Lobby's daily programs on 642 stations.

Depositions obtained by Liberty Lobby attorneys brought out that the ADL, which keeps a secret enemies list of perhaps as many as 2,000,000 names, had engaged in a secret nationwide campaign of calumny to drive Liberty Lobby off the air. Liberty Lobby's "crime" in ADL's eyes was its opposition to America's neurotic blank-check policy toward Israel.

Irwin Suall, an ADL official, admitted under oath that the organization had launched the third biggest media blitz in its history to get Mutual to drop Liberty Lobby. The two largest campaigns were in 1967 and 1973 to mobilize nationwide support for Israel during the Six-Day and Yom Kippur wars. Despite this, the ADL has still not registered as a foreign agent and is still certified by the IRS as a tax-exempt organization, a classification which supposedly forbids the organization to engage in politics. When asked if the ADL took part in the campaign that defeated the reelection try of John Rarick, an anti-Zionist congressman from Louisiana, Suall after some consultation with his lawyers, said he would only answer if ordered to by the Court. Arnold Forster, onetime head of the ADL, was also questioned, but it turned out he had a very poor memory and when he did answer often erupted in violent tantrums and a string of obscenities. Joseph P. Kamp, a veteran ADL watcher, has claimed that Forster was a member of the Golos-Bentley Communist espionage ring and was once arrested for painting swastikas on a synagogue.

Meanwhile, the U.S. Labor party, a weirdo group of renegade Jews and WASPs, is suing the ADL for $26 million, charging defamation, assault and harassment. Lyndon H. LaRouche, party chief, has alleged that the ADL has ties with the Mafia and the international dope trade.

Note: The financial clout of the ADL is illustrated by a rundown on money-raising campaigns of "charitable organizations" recently published by the Town Clerk of Palm Beach, Florida, in the Palm Beach Daily News. The lowest amount raised was by Saint Mary's Hospital Auxiliary -- $2,920. The highest amount was raised by the ADL -- $883,909.

On the Kennedy Trail

Republican "truth squads" have been dogging the political trail of Democrats for lo these many presidential elections. It comes as no shock that a "Kennedy truth squad" has now taken shape, complete with the usual bulk-mail requests for $500, $100, $10, etc. The sponsoring group is called the Conservatives Against Liberal Legislation. Though it doesn't flaunt a party label, the chances are minimal that the officers are Democrats, socialists, communists, anarchists or Trotskyites.

The group promises to tell the truth about Fat Face's support of SALT II, socialized medicine and ERA, and his opposition to the B-1 bomber, tax cuts and limits on federal spending. No mention is made of Kennedy's all-out dedication to affirmative action, forced busing and Israel, or to his ambivalent attitude toward immigration.

Since the truth squad itself does not want to tell the truth about Kennedy's stand on these issues, it might not be an exaggeration to call it the half-truth squad.

Cholly Bilderberger

In the previous column, the illuminating career of William Stephenson, the Canadian who headed British and then Allied intelligence during World War II, and helped Churchill and Roosevelt steer their countries into war against Hitler, was discussed at some length. The moral of that career seems to be: if a decent, intelligent man at the center of power decides that a dangerous and oppressive situation (Hitler in Stephenson's case, early on, rightly or wrongly) warrants illegal actions, he will take them. And he will be effective, in the full righteousness of his decent certitude, in joining with other men (assuming he can find them) to form a Mafia-like organization to work toward the awakening of their fellow citizens to action and eventual victory over the forces of dark and evil. The same attitude on the part of the American Revolutionists prevailed over their oppressors. Why can't we follow such examples and overthrow our minority rulers?

If decency is at the core of any such resistance, and if lack of resistance implies indecency, what does that make us? The column closed by saying that if a conspiratorial elite believing it must save this country does not come into being -- as in the American Revolution and World War II -- it will mean that decency in this country is even deadlier than it seems to be.

Grim enough, and obvious enough. But just for the pleasure of speculating, let us imagine that decency is not entirely dead, and that enough decent men will soon become sufficiently driven by conscience to form a conspiratorial elite. Just how would the victorious scenario of that conspiracy read? As noted in the previous column, the course of such a conspiracy will be difficult enough without spelling it out in advance. However, I can outline my general notions without giving away any secrets.

The original members of the conspiratorial elite -- the CE from here on, for brevity's sake -- would be elite because of a combination of qualities. Foremost among them would obviously be decency, intelligence, dedication, resourcefulness, patience, lack of fear and the ability to act. Also, they would have to be in or have access to power. Cunning and ruthlessness would be desirable. Such men would be drawn together because they would see that the collapse of the United States has already begun -- its final crumbling is only a matter of time. They would wish to act, not to prevent the collapse -- or at least not to prevent it entirely, because it is too advanced for that -- but to guide it, to make it as constructive as possible (in seeing, for instance, that it takes as much dead wood as can be unloaded), and to be ready to create a new and healthy society.

The difference between such men and their program and the men and program(s) of the so-called right wing is immense. The majority of the latter believe that this country and its "free enterprise" system are salvageable -- and desirable, to boot -- and that they can work through the existing system to save both country and system. Those of the right wing who go further and propose, for example, a military takeover, have no real idea as to how to control such a takeover or its aftermath. They have no true appreciation of the organic progression of events, nor of the fact that material selfishness -- the protection of one's own possessions and the system which produces them above all else -- never works as the platform for political change and control. They want to return to the days when this system worked, unable to see that it is a finished system, and that they will go down with it if they don't disown it.

Our CE would have certain points of similarity with the American Revolutionists and the maneuverers of World War II. But there would also be profound differences. The similarities with the Revolutionists are obvious: decent, intelligent men of the respectable Colonial upper class (there were few, if any, signers of the Declaration of Independence from the lower or middle classes) found certain conditions oppressive and, finally, intolerable, and set out to remedy them. In so doing, they had to go against established authority. Before they could do that, though, there had to be a psychological shift in their thinking. The authority of the king, theretofore sacrosanct, especially after the Restoration, became first debatable and then undesirable. Today, that may not seem an extraordinary step for respectable men, but it was then, comparable in our time to challenging the produce-and-consume system, which we have invested with divine right. Denying royal authority was so earth-shattering that the majority of the Colonial upper class would have nothing to do with it and remained Tories -- supporters of the king and the existing system. We tend to forget that the Revolutionists were so termed because they revolted against the concept of kingship. We are familiar with the history book abuses in the name of that king -- unrepresented taxation, military occupations, and all the rest -- but none of them could have been fought until the king, the force behind them, was denied. In our time, behind minority oppression and all the other horrors of chaotic America lies the gi-gantic authority of produce-and-consume. We fear that if we resist the minorities or any other manifestation of chaos there will be civil war and a stock market collapse; the awful produce-and-consume god will take away our power plants and automobiles and we will be banished to eternal darkness and immobility. It is likely that our CE -- our Revolutionists -- will come from the contemporary respectable upper class; but the majority of that class may well remain Tory -- that is, loyal to produce-and-consume and all its works, including, however reluctantly, the minority overseers. Our CE should certainly be prepared for irony, and expect the Sons and Daughters of the American Revolution and the other members of societies with connections to the Colonial past to be firmly against their modern revolution. They should look, like the Colonial CE, for middle- and lower-class -- and foreign -- support.

The dissimilarities between our CE and the Revolutionists should be equally obvious. The latter could afford to be open; they published anarchical opinions, and argued and held their meetings in full view of their rulers, who did not move against them until it came to actual war. The whole progression was clear and clean. Today, the white liberal and minority overlords, backed by their foreign counterparts in the West and by Communist opportunism, would not be so lazily generous. If Bill Stephenson and Churchill, with a far more palatable program in opposing Hitler, had to operate in secret, how much more circumspect would our CE have to be.

To sum up: Our CE would be like the first American Revolutionists in spirit and composition, but like the Stephenson-Churchill operation in execution, only more so. They would be drawn together because they would see collapse as already underway and accelerating. As decent men, they would be compelled to act; as intelligent men, they would want to act successfully.

Success would come only if they could make decency prevail. First, by awakening it in their fellows; then by unleashing it against indecency, really a synonym for chaos; and, ultimately, by using it to build a new society. With the vast majority of their fellows hypnotized by produce-and-consume, and thus indecency and chaos, this would not be easy nor quickly accomplished. It would take time, great patience, and total commitment. The American people are not going to deny their brazen idols without a struggle; and the counterrevolution will be intense and dedicated.

The CE would have no written records and very little internal conversation. Their program would operate on several levels:

1. Recruiting others. This would be done mainly on the basis of impending collapse, beginning at the center and working outward. Such conversations are already commonplace among prominent Americans. But instead of being merely cosmetic and deadened, as they are now, such talks would be guided by the CE members, who would stay just one step ahead of the potential recruit and stop at the point of seriousness past which that recruit could not bring himself to go. Like any conspiracy, this one would have endless concentric rings of commitment and ability fanning out from the core, and there would be a place for anyone who wanted any place whatsoever in it at any level. The choice of whether to be decent or indecent would be put and answered in many, many ways.

In recruiting the military, it would have to be made plain that the CE would be running things. The outer rings of the CE would inevitably be penetrated, but it would be very difficult to penetrate to the core. Incidentally, many infiltrators, finding decency as the prime mover, would defect and join. Or become double agents. CE gains would stay ahead of CE losses by a considerable margin.

2. Squeezing others. This is, perhaps, a corollary to recruitment. In all relations with others and in orchestrated media propaganda (the CE would be composed of people with enough power to do this, even in minority/white liberal strongholds), the chaos and indecency of the United States would be constantly emphasized. The indecency of passive acceptance would be implied. The point would be to make it as difficult as possible for the Majority to justify its quiescence, by creating a climate of moral uncertainty, self-questioning and turmoil, laying the groundwork for future commitment and action. The real struggle, as in all such conspiracies, would be behind the scenes between the CE and the loyalists (Tories) of the same class. The CE's deadliest enemies would not be the minorities (who are not, with the exception of the Jews, really averse to order rather than chaos), nor even middle- and lower-class white liberals, but the upper-class Tories, the Elliot Richardsons who have bet their lives on the system and have to fight to the end for it. This fight would be especially intense at the beginning of the CE's operations, but would continue until final CE victory.

3. Speeding up formal collapse. From positions of power, especially in industry and finance, the CE could and would pull the country's life support systems wherever possible. The CE would orchestrate events in every area of American life to achieve desired results. They are already strategically located in positions of power in Washington, New York and elsewhere, so this would not be difficult; and they could infiltrate any organization where they were not established. The loyalists would call them "traitors," of course; and, just as naturally, the CE would consider the loyalists the real traitors. The CE would go no further than it had to in any operation, but there would be nothing it would shrink from if necessary.

4. Operations. The CE would not compromise with the ends of the conspiracy, but would be extremely flexible as to the means. They would compromise and lie in the tradition of conspiracies, and might even have temporary alliances with their enemies. But at bottom they would aim at total takeover and settle for nothing less. All alliances, even those with persons and groups holding parallel beliefs in certain areas, would only be for convenience, and would be terminated as soon as the partners were no longer useful. (Bloodlessly, if possible.) The basis of common cause would be decency and aversion to chaos, and as the collapse deepens and more and more people -- from the minorities as well as from the Majority -- will find that basis irresistible. Groups would form in direct imitation of and competition with the CE, apparent carbon copies which the CE would either ignore, absorb or eliminate at the appropriate time. (Unless persuaded that the rival group was even more decent and dedicated than itself, at which point the CE would either be absorbed or eliminated.) A false or inadequate CE would be worse than none, and the CE would be particularly vigilant on that point, internally as well as externally. The CE would prefer a peaceful solution, but would not be deterred, no matter the price, in any fight.

5. The post-collapse program. This could be the most overt of the CE's activities. Prominent think tanks have already addressed the possibility of American collapse, and guessed at what sort of "desirable" society might emerge. The CE, though, would see such a program as a real necessity, not a theoretical exercise. This would obviously be the most interesting and constructive part of the CE's pre-collapse activities. Equally obviously, such a program in its entirety is beyond the scope of this column, but certain generalities can and should be mentioned. The main thrust would be to avoid the sequence of the past hundred years, in which slavery to unchecked produce-and-consume so weakened the American Majority (which enslaved itself willingly, it must be conceded) that it became incapable of protecting its own interests, like an alcoholic in the last stages. If the Grand Inquisitor is right, and humanity will always enslave itself in some way if not prevented from doing so by an elite, then it is time for the elite as well as for humanity -- the American Majority in this case -- to face that fact. The Majority passion for prostrating itself to produce-and-consume would be ruthlessly curbed.

Secondly, in a multiracial society -- and we shall probably always be that, even after the unavoidable (and possibly desirable) carnage of the collapse -- a successful elitist government cannot be overtly racist. By that time the elite will assume -- backed by the experience of the collapse -- that a decent, enlightened Majority wants to be assisted to a realization of its cultural destiny. That assistance can follow two main lines: The positive, by which the strengths of the people are aided and brought out. The negative, by which the weaknesses are curbed. But the elite can do more than assist through leadership; in the end it will be up to the Majority itself to realize its cultural destiny. Successful in that or not, though, the Majority in the CE's post-collapse world will be living on a plane of dignity and possibility rather than in the present morass of subhuman ignominy. The minorities will have the concurrent opportunity to work out their own cultural destinies. What they do, however, will not be of great interest to the Majority; nor should the Majority be of interest to the minorities. Majority and minorities should be able to coexist on different levels of cultural destiny without being any more conscious of each other than different animals on a farm. The elite will not permit it to be otherwise.

On the basis of the five steps above, the CE will mount its campaign to take over. To the average American, the implementation of these steps will not seem as drastic nor as unusual as they do on paper, because they will unfold slowly and with an organic inevitability. For instance, he may not even notice the initial shifts in the media; and may not pay much attention when a changing climate provokes a strong reaction from the minority/liberal forces. When a neighbor talks to him about the horrors of the school system and advises him to pull his children out, he may demur. But when the minorities riot at that school (perhaps orchestrated, perhaps not), and a number of his neighbors remove their children, he'll probably do the same. He will become accustomed to the screeches of the minority/liberal coalition about what awful things are happening and how difficult it is to pinpoint the culprits, whose worst crime seems to be calling for change. By the time welfare payments are cut off nationwide, and the minorities riot and the military step in, he will feel they brought it on themselves, and be quite indifferent to their fate. Cries from the liberals about being framed will fall on deaf ears.

From then on, events will move rapidly. The stock market will crash, at long last, the country's monetary system will fall into chaos, and the army will take over completely, under the direction of the CE, which will become public, assuming control of all Federal, state and local governments.

In the next few years after that, our average American's life will be very difficult materially, and he will lose many of his comforts, but he will find that he receives a great deal in return. His life, like that of his country, will have form and direction. The criminal and chaotic element will be gone, and he will be able to walk the cities without fear, read a book or watch television devoid of minority propaganda, and put his children in peaceful schools. The minority members with whom he deals will be polite, and conscious that they are a minority, especially in a cultural sense. They will be grateful for the opportunity to coexist, and will conduct themselves accordingly. For his part, he will treat them politely, and respect their rights as they respect his. If he wasn't decent to begin with, he will have become so, given a chance. The pre-collapse, produce-and-consume, minority-dominated nightmare will seem a very bad dream.

It seems quite improbable that a CE could take charge and produce such results, given the reality and seeming inevitability of that very bad dream today. But even so, it is important to realize that the invincibility of the forces of darkness rests not on their own strength but on the weakness and lack of decency of our side. They are not holding us down as much as we are holding them up. It is difficult to believe that we are so debased that there are no Bill Stephensons out there; it is even more difficult to believe that if they are out there, they are not decent enough to act.

A conspiratorial elite is the only chance left to America, and only if it comes into being soon, because the hour is very late. Nothing else has any chance at all. There arrives a time in every fated situation when the uselessness of further conversation and discussion becomes apparent to everyone. Even the most addicted procrastinators and evaders finally tire of baby-talk and understand that it is action or nothing. This is not to say that they do act; only that they recognize finality when it occurs. And for anyone who has the necessary qualifications for service in a conspiratorial elite, the fact that the moment of decision is at hand for him is far more obvious. It is inescapable.

NOTES FROM THE SCEPTRED ISLE

The murder of Lord Louis Mountbatten was a crime, but it does strike me that if we had to lose any member of the royal family, he was the one we could best spare. It was he, with his scrawny Jewish wife, who handed over India to the most appalling massacres in 1947. Little wonder that he has been the darling of the media ever since.

I am reading Lord Lovat's memoir, March Past, complete with introduction by that marvelous anachronism, Iain Moncreife, a man worthy to set beside Gayre of Nigg and other eccentric Scots. I don't care what Auberon Waugh says, the reason Lovat chucked Evelyn Waugh out of the commandos was that he was a damned nuisance. Anyway, Lovat's part in the Dieppe raid, climbing the cliffs to knock out guns which were massacring the Canadians on the beach, speaks for itself. Every single photograph in the book features fearfully handsome Nordics. Alas, Lovat's brother, Hugh Fraser, is well ensconced with the powers-that-be, which is probably why the book was published by the loathsome "Lord" Weidenfeld. Instaurationists no doubt realize the whole commando myth is based on the effectiveness of the Boer commandos during the South African wars.

There is something to be said for a tradition of standing against the tide. That is why there is a disproportionate number of racists among Irish Protestants, and English and (even more) Scotch Roman Catholics.

Here is a passage from the introduction by Moncreife: "The celebrated Simon Fraser, eleventh Lord Lovat, had abducted my own ancestress, widow of the ninth Lord, in 1697, and forcibly married her while a piper drowned her screams and clansmen cut off her stays with their dirks and so thrust her into bed." Well, after all, he did marry her. It's not like the old ballad of Edom O'Gordon, where the villain burns the lady alive when she refuses to be abducted.

What moralists fail to understand is that the whole aim of the pornography industry is to frustrate, not satisfy. It is the frustrated who buy the illustrated sex magazines or who go to see "blue" films. The women photographed for these purposes remain with those who control the market. The weak Majority boobs pay through the nose not for satisfaction, but for more frustration.

I have often been puzzled by the Jewish objection to Beethoven's Ninth Symphony. The choral parts have occasionally been referred to as typically "Nazi." Yet the sentiments expressed in the adapted words of Schiller, borrowed by Beethoven, are extremely internationalist in nature: "All men shall be brothers wherever thy soft wing passes." I now think the reason must be that the very idea of joy, a sure sign of mental health, is hateful to the Jewish mind. Besides, it may remind them of "Strength through Joy." However, there is more to it than that. The Romantic appeal to universal sympathy is, by implication, directed only to those capable of responding. It is not unconditional, and implies rejection of those unable to respond.

One of the subtle ways in which Whig (viz. liberal) historians tell us that there is no alternative to the present mess is by denigrating the past. For example, we are frequently told that the teeth of Queen Elizabeth I were black (they were), from which we are supposed to infer that everyone had bad teeth at that time. This is very far from the truth. The English plague pits from the 14th to the 17th centuries show extremely good teeth, rather worn down from chewing rough bread. Only the rich could afford sugar, which rots the teeth of most Anglo-Saxons nowadays.

At a recent trial in London, ex-Chief Superintendent John Groves of the London Metropolitan police was heavily fined for passing on secret information to "Sir" Eric Miller concerning a notorious crook called Judah Binstock. A Bar Mitzvah organized by Eric Miller in Jerusalem in January 1978 was attended by up to 100 guests, including Groves. It is good to know that law and order are in such safe hands.

Tell me, how much will you be giving this year to UNICEF's Save the Children Fund? You might as well know where the money will be going. Rhodesian forces who attacked the guerrilla base of Chimoio in Mozambique found piles of medical equipment from UNICEF, as well as from Eastern Bloc countries, and even South Africa! In one bunker they discovered two tons of food supplies, including Canadian and Dutch canned goods and powdered milk packets marked "Gift from the Government of Switzerland."

Enoch Powell is a complex character who has done sterling service in pointing out the dangers of colored immigration into Britain. But he is more a prophet of nationalism than of racism. Indeed, he is on record as being in favor of assimilating colored immigrants by intermarriage, and his objection to large numbers is that they are obviously unassimilable. He has spoken of them "wearing the uniform of color," but at the same time has said that he does not know what race is. His patriotism is of the mind rather than the heart, and he sees traditions as an essential social binding force, rather than as a deeply felt collective idea which transcends and evolves. In other words, he has philosophically much more in common with American kosher conservatives than with radical rightists. Consider this remark of his to Northern Irish Protestants: "It is blasphemy to attach words like loyal and loyalist to any one who does not accept the law of the land." But what if laws are unjust, as the race relations laws are? Is our obsession with "law and order" going to make us obey them? I rather think not -- and I can think of many other Englishmen in history who reacted against laws which they conceived as unjust.

Lord Graham, the Duke of Montrose, is leaving Rhodesia to settle in South Africa. Who can blame him? He fought the good fight in favor of the Unilateral Declaration of Independence, and remained a hard-liner throughout as a minister in Ian Smith's government. He did all he could, and sees no point in remaining under black majority rule. For those who remain, there will be a gradual (or swift?) whittling away of their rights, and probably sequestration of their assets, as in Kenya and Zambia. Only the Rhodesian army remains as a shining example of what can be achieved by whites in Africa.

Strangely enough, I am not hostile toward "Sir" James Goldsmith. His mother was a Gentile (which explains why he is better looking than most Jews), and he has told his friends that he is against race mixing, "I know it is a mistake because I am a half-caste myself." For some reason, half-Jews with Jewish mothers are more pernicious than half-Jews with Jewish fathers. I suppose it is partly because the former have non-Jewish names, and can therefore infiltrate more easily. Humphrey Berkeley, the ex-Labour and ex-Conservative MP is a horrible example. Charles Kingsley and General Booth also had Jewish mothers. I think it has something to do with the fact that the Jewish Momma is even more repulsive than the Jewish Poppa. This may have something to do with the fact that Jewish men far prefer Nordic women. The Rothschilds, who marry aristocratic Gentile wives, are much easier to get along with in conversation, and look a lot nicer too.

I have had the opportunity to meet Goldsmith and have even been with him at a gambling club (kept by an old friend of mine) where I saw him playing roulette at £2,000 a spin. He was incisive, but not unpleasant personally, and his views were impeccably just right-of-center kosher. He is credited with originating the saying that London will be the Calcutta of the 21st century. I cannot imagine a 100% Jew making any such remark. In view of the number of Bengalis in London, it comes too near the bone. I have not yet seen the magazine Now which Goldsmith is publishing, but it is probably less poisonous than Time or Newsweek.

A Briton Expatiates on a Nobull Theme

John Nobull in "Notes from the Sceptred Isle" (November) correctly emphasizes that hereditarists should not overlook the environmental factor. By what other process but through the wrong environment has the Majority, in Britain and America, descended to its present condition?

As implied by John Nobull, youth is the stage where the environment counts the most, and in this connection I feel we must recognize the failure of "liberal" society to provide the kind of background in which our young can grow up to become useful citizens.

I see no solution to this problem except through our acceptance of a degree of regimentation in the lives of the young, culminating -- at least in the case of males -- in compulsory military service. Those who would throw up their hands in horror at such concepts have failed to suggest any alternative process by which the huge surplus of spare time at the disposal of young people can be filled by other than useless pursuits, at the worst anti-social and at the best of no benefit whatever to body, mind and spirit.

Observe in any town or city in the West today the droves of youngsters idling their time in coffee bars and on the streets, a sickly pallor on their faces and their eyes registering boredom and despair -- relieved only by the drug of abominable music screeching out from juke-boxes or transistors, and you have a monument to liberalism's obsession with the "freedom of the individual."

In fact, such youth are not really free at all but are just being regimented in a different way -- in a way conducive to anarchy, nihilism and alienation from national and racial identity. No one can pretend that in their response to fashions of music, dress, hairstyle, living habits and views about society (where they have any at all) they are anything better than slaves.

We must recognize that real freedom is something earned, and something that can only be beneficially used, by people who attain real maturity in life whereby they may be fit to employ such rights and privileges that that freedom bestows in a manner enhancing of self and community. Such maturity is reached by some adults (although only a minority); it is scarcely ever reached by people in their teens. From this it follows that teenagers are bound in some way to be directed in their way of life, whether openly in the form of strong adult leadership or covertly in the form of fashions, fads and ideologies fed to them by means of a mass media controlled by those whom they seldom see. In my submission, the former is vastly preferable.

Such direction is particularly necessary in the case of those who would otherwise fall prey to what has been called in your magazine "The Feminizing Effects of Formal Education." Education without extra-, and indeed intra-, curricular activities that mold real men and women is a blight on our civilization, not a boon to it. It is perhaps a reason why the Nordic element in our populace, which on average is found represented most strongly in the educated classes, is also the element which manifests the highest degree of flabbiness.

Memphis. Wyeth Chandler is the first mayor of Memphis in more than forty years to be elected to three consecutive terms. White voters, aware that one great Southern city after another -- Atlanta, Richmond, New Orleans, Birmingham -- had fallen to blacks, turned out at the polls on November 15 in sufficient numbers to reelect Chandler. To help get out the crucial vote, members of the Southern National Party spent many hours working at Chandler's campaign headquarters. They also distributed literature across the city which told whites what could be expected if a black was elected mayor. This work was a significant factor in the outcome of the election.

A cross-burning on the lawn of the residence of the black mayoral candidate, former Criminal Court Judge W. Otis Higgs, Jr., added fuel to the closing days of the campaign. A second cross-burning at the home of a Mrs. Rosie Lee Williams uncovered the fact that she had previously filed a paternity suit claiming that Judge Higgs was the father of her illegitimate son (now 21).

The final tally was 120,207 votes for Chandler (52.9%), 107,232 votes for Higgs (47.1%). In the fifty-five precincts where at least 98% of the registered voters are white, Chandler received 56,314 votes (90.7%), Higgs 5,744 (9.3%). Overall, the mayor obtained less than 2% of the black vote, though he repeatedly emphasized he would welcome such support and would continue to treat all black Memphians fairly, as indeed he had during his two previous administrations. The racial makeup of Memphis is approximately 50% black.

In Chandler's victory speech, he graciously stated that his opponent had "conducted himself throughout his campaign as a gentleman." Higgs, when he conceded, sarcastically opined, "The real loser tonight is the city of Memphis." He added, "I feel an urge to shed tears, but if I cried here tonight, I'd be playing right into the hands of Wyeth Chandler."

The black candidate picked up some support from the wealthiest voters. In one affluent area known for its concentration of Jews, 13.7% of the vote went to Higgs. In Memphis, the black-Jewish alliance seems to be holding firm.

It should be noted The Commercial Appeal, Memphis' largest daily paper, backed the black candidate. Chandler's accomplishments as mayor were downgraded, while Higgs' virtues and ability to get Memphis "moving" -- to keep it from being "polarized" -- were praised to the skies. The newspaper attributed his defeat to a lackluster campaign and the fact that he did not know anything about city government. Higgs, typically, blamed his defeat on racism.

Washington, D.C. The Palestine America Congress, 400 delegates strong, met in the nation's capital last summer. One of the speakers was Karim Khalaf, mayor of a West Bank town, who noted that 36% of the land seized by the Israelis in the 1967 war has now been transformed into Israeli settlements. When the congress adjourned, an Executive Committee sent out an "Action Memorandum" calling for "an alliance between various minority groups on issues of joint concern, including the liberation of Palestine." By such tactics Americans of Palestinian and Arab descent are trying to capitalize on the black-Jewish feud provoked by the firing of Andrew Young. Since they feel they can get no support from the Majority, they are working the black side of the street. With friends like the Russians, the Russian satellites, most of the Third World, and American blacks, the Palestinians, though white themselves, are increasingly exposing themselves to the charge of being antiwhite, pro-Moscow and anti-Western. Zionist propaganda is not reluctant to reinforce this image. If there was any morality in international affairs, the dispossessed Palestinians should find their greatest support from the American Majority, preferably from believing Christians. But morality in the U.S. plays second fiddle to media immorality, and most believing Christians prefer the people of the Book and the napalm bomb to the homeless Palestinians. Consequently, strange political alignments arise. A, who should be helping B, becomes the ally of C, because both A and B are prevented by unending salvos of hate propaganda from discovering what has really been happening in the Middle East.

Pinellas Park, Florida. Moses Green, the philandering black dean of the town's high school, has finally been suspended. He was first reprimanded for sexual misconduct with teenage white girls in October 1976, while teaching at another high school. After another complaint, he was put on probation. Then, in March 1978, after being promoted and transferred to Pinellas Park High School, another white female student complained of his advances. Although he failed a lie detector test, he was kept on. In January 1979, another complaint was ignored. Finally on May 7, 1979, he was charged with immorality, misconduct in office and gross insubordination. Nevertheless, he was kept on at full salary. According to Florida law, failure to report known or suspected child abuse is a second-degree misdemeanor or punishable by a 60-day jail sentence. We may assume that the pedagogues who have been covering up for Green for the last three years will not spend one second behind bars.

Richmond, VA. Dr. Gilbert Silverman, Freudian psychiatrist, pleaded guilty to three charges of sodomy and three counts of unlawful sexual intercourse with three female mental patients.

TV fundamentalist preacher Jerry Falwell spiced a speech at an "I Love America" rally attended by Virginia Governor John N. Dalton, Lt. Governor Charles Robb (Mr. Linda Johnson) and Attorney General Marshall Coleman with the remark that Jews "can make more money accidentally than you can on purpose." Jewish organizations agonized that Dalton, Robb, Coleman and other political officials should have left the rally the moment this unfunny joke was uttered. Ironically, Falwell's speech was rousing pro-Zionist in keeping with the present trend of fundamentalist Christian foreign policy.

Dr. Eric Lipman has sold a 70-page Hitler speech, together with other letters and memorabilia by Nazi leaders, to Brandeis University for $20,000. Lipman did not explain how he obtained this material.

Canada. From our north-of-the-border correspondent. Some friends and I recently enjoyed a concert by the Swedish pop-rock group Abba at Maple Leaf Gardens in Toronto. A pleasure for the ear, there was much to catch an observant eye. The Nordic handsomeness of the musicians was highlighted on a stage with a backdrop done in a Northern mountains motif. The unmistakable Abba sound is as much a creation of an ingenious audio technology as it is of musical artistry. Enthusiastic and well-behaved, the audience of about 18,000 was pure white. In composition it had fewer teenagers than the standard rock concert crowd. Not a whiff of marijuana smoke tainted the air. European rock of the Abba brand, with its roots in European folk music, is as genuinely white as American country music.

Ireland. During his triumphant tour of the Emerald Isle, Pope John Paul II was introduced to a Polish priest named Father Marian, who was described as a "survivor" not only of Auschwitz and Birkenau, but also of Buchenwald and Dachau. Since all these camps have been called extermination centers by the media, Father Marian must have five lives less than a cat.

Paris. One of France's leading gangsters is a certain Pierre Goldman, who has literally gotten away with murder in recent years. Somehow, instead of going to jail, he spent most of his time, when he wasn't breaking the law, in promoting leftist causes. Since the government seemed to have a special affection for the invulnerable Goldman, vigilantes decided to take the matter into their own hands. Goldman was shot down in cold blood and in broad daylight by three men armed with pistols. The "Honor of the Police" movement claimed responsibility in a phone call to a French news agency. Since Goldman was a Jew, his murder was big news. Eulogizing the dead man while five thousand Jews screamed antifascist obscenities, Chief Rabbi Jacob Kaplan claimed the act was triggered by a new wave of French anti-Semitism.

West Germany. In West Berlin, police have arrested one Günter Allon, a Jew who set fire to his own house and restaurant in order to collect the insurance. Before the conflagration he carefully decked the walls with swastikas so he could blame the arson on neo-Nazis.

The Bonn government has earmarked 1.5 million marks toward the construction of the Albert Einstein Center at the Weizman Institute in Rehovoth, Israel. Ulrich Duebber, member of the West German parliament, said that the center will strengthen the already close ties between German and Israeli physicists. Meanwhile, the parliamentary budget committee has approved 500,000 marks for the German History Chair at the University of Tel Aviv.

Oberammergau. Ever since Jews first became a world power, approximately a hundred years ago, they have sought to black out any artistic manifestation anywhere that put them in a bad light. Nothing, of course, puts them in a worse light than a dramatization of Jesus' last days in Jerusalem. Almost every decade for the last 350 years the Oberammergau Passion Play in Germany has been doing just that. As the Gospels tell it and as the Oberammergauans play it, Jewish priests and a Jewish mob demanded Jesus' death and get their wish when Pilate washes his hands. Needless to say, the Oberammergau production has long been a target of Jewish censors, and after World War II the pressure has been fearful. A few years ago the Anti-Defamation League sent two theology professors to the Bavarian Alps to rewrite the script. This summer the audience will hear the following addressed directly to Jewish ticket holders, "Greetings also to you brothers and sisters of the people from whom the Savior came. We here in no way wish to look for guilt in others." It might be noted that this disclaimer was not used in the NBC-TV Holocaust show. It might also be noted that rather than revise the Oberammergau script, the ADL could more effectively exercise the residual anti-Semitism of the Crucifixion and the events leading up to it by going all the way and changing the master script -- the New Testament. No doubt the ADLers will get around to this someday.

Moscow. The following is a partial list of American books confiscated by Soviet authorities preliminary to the opening of the 1979 Moscow International Book Fair:

Bukharin by Stephan F. Cohen

The Arts of David Levine

Identity: Adventures in Living Judaism by Martin A. Cohen

White Nights by Menahem Begin

Art and Revolution by Berger

The Holocaust Years by Chertokh and Spencer

Modern Jewish History by Chazen Cheren.

My Country by Abba Eban

Soviet and American Society, a Comparison by Paul Hollander

Plus books by Orwell, Solzhenitsyn, Sakharov and Svetlana Alliluyeva, Stalin's Americanized daughter.

Almost certainly to be banned in any New York International Book Fair will be a new Russian bestselling novel At the Last Frontier by Valentin Pikul. The author portrays Rasputin as a Zionist "tool," on the ground he had a Jewish secretary named Aaron Simanovich (Instauration, Nov. 1976). The holy or unholy monk is also charged with being involved in the operation of nightclubs owned by Jewish bankers.

Spain. The Spanish Tourist Bureau is trying to dip into the thick wallets of American Jews by running full-page ads in Jewish newspapers. The headlines sirenishly sing, "Come to Spain and revisit the Golden Age of Judaism." But there are problems -- coordination problems. Timed with the release of the ad and often appearing in the same newspapers, was a press handout from the B'nai B'rith International denouncing Spain for not recognizing Israel and for cozying up to the PLO. When Arafat visited Madrid, the wicket got even stickier. The Conference of Presidents of Major American Jewish Organizations, the ex-officio State Department, called in Spanish Ambassador José Llado, lectured him severely and sent him scurrying off to Madrid with a quasi-ultimatum: Recognize Israel or face a travel or economic boycott! If it should be a travel ban, Instaurationists will know where to spend their next European vacation.

Israel. Samuel Flatto-Sharon is the Stavisky of the 1970s. A Paris court sentenced him in absentia for bilking French citizens out of $250 million by creating fictitious land investment companies which never repaid huge amounts of borrowed money. Flatto-Sharon fled with his loot to Israel where he bought himself a seat in the Knesset. Although Israeli authorities have charged him with vote fraud, they are most reluctant to have him extradited to France. Flatto-Sharon runs an international "hit team" that was last heard of in the African bush trying to hunt down Idi Amin.

More than three years after they were kidnapped by Israeli secret agents in Kenya, Thomas Reuter, 27, and Brigitte Schulte, 28, two young Germans, were brought to trial in Israel and given a five-year prison sentence, which means they will be released in 1981. The trial, presided over by a military judge, was closed to the press and the charges against the defendants were never made public. Rumor, and only rumor, has it that the two defendants had supplied the PLO with information about El Al flight schedules in Nairobi, as a prelude to an act of sabotage that never came off. After their capture and after they had been spirited off to Israel (as flagrant a violation of international law as the Eichmann snatch), the two were tortured and forced to sign confessions. Both had to wear black hoods for several months, even during their interrogation. This kind of "nonphysical" torture is often worse than the electric prods and thumb-hanging treatment Israelis use on Arabs. For one year the Israel government denied that the two Germans were in custody. The world press, naturally, was not interested. It reserves its wrath for Soviet barbarism, not the Israeli variety.

India. A Hindu organization is doing a lot of anti-Christian evangelizing in this huge subcontinent. It is run by high-caste types who have been attacked as fascists. Apparently the leaders are preparing for the inevitable day when the fraud of "Indian democracy" disintegrates. Their huge membership is uniformed, organized into corps, and practices impressive semi-military drills.
