

Heritage Switching

Ancient Egypt exerted some cultural influence on Ancient Greece. Plato himself admitted this, as would anyone else who has taken the time to compare the columns of the massive Egyptian temples at Karnak with the far more graceful and fluted but perhaps derivative Doric columns that hold up the roof of the Parthenon.

But the glory that was Greece ever grates on the equalitarian and minority psychosis, which now inspires and distorts so much of present-day art criticism. To feed the envy and frustration of those who know their own ancestors could never come close to matching Greek art, Martin Bernal, an Englishman with a Spanish name who is presently teaching at Cornell, has written a book, Black Athena, which pretends that Ancient Egypt practically fathered Ancient Greece. One of his more preposterous claims is that "as much as fifty percent of the Greek language" is derived from the Phoenician and Egyptian.

Bernal dutifully attacks what he calls the "Aryan model" of Ancient Greece, brashly attempting to Egyptianize and Semitize the culture that produced Homer, Aeschylus, Aristophanes and Aristotle. His anti-Grecoan tirades recall the myopic and racist fulminations of Philo, an Alexandrian Jew who wrote that the greatness of Greece was due to Old Testament celebrities -- e.g., Plato stole from Moses, Heraclitus from the Bible, Greek law was based on the Ten Commandments, and so on. Bernal goes so far as to accuse Western luminaries like Goethe, Matthew Arnold and Ernest Renan of racism (the pot calling the kettle black) for trying to distance themselves from "lesser peoples" by emphasizing the Greek connection.

The importance of the Greek component of the Western heritage has always been challenged by the Hebraists, the Christian fundamentalists and the trucklers to Judaism. In the age of faith, the Christian heritage outweighed the Greek. In the Renaissance and in more rational and more recent eras, the Greek linkage came to the fore. It is no surprise that in this minority-ridden age the Judeo-Christian (accent on the Judeo) heritage is constantly assuming more importance and more attention. Bernal's books (three are scheduled) are simply a bullheaded attempt to give more impetus to the old-timey Jewry-über-Alles faction by puffing up Egyptian and Semitic history.

Hypocritical Duo

They not only don't practice what they preach, they do the reverse. Carl Rowan, Lyndon Johnson's onetime affirmative action ambassador to Finland and now an affirmative action author, columnist and TV talk show pundit, shot a young white male skinny-dipper in the hand with an unregistered .22 caliber pistol. Yet over the years no one has sermonized more against handgun sales and possession than Carl, who won't be prosecuted for breaking the law, though the intruders will. We have no sympathy for the young trespassers (Majority male, Jewish female) who left a trail of marijuana butts at the side of the Negro's ritzy pool, far removed, needless to say, from the black section of Washington. But neither do we have any sympathy for forked tongues, whether in black or white mouths.

In this age of hype and hypocrisy, Rowan has a rival in lawyer William Kunstler, who has the habit of calling anyone a racist who questions the acts and motives of the black criminals he specializes in defending. At last May's opening of the trial of Larry Davis, a black accused of trying to murder nine New York City policemen, Kunstler peremptorily challenged every white juror. When the Jewish judge chided him for his racial purge, Kunstler threatened to take a walk. A non-Jewish lawyer would have been jailed for contempt for such behavior, but all is quickly forgiven when minority networking comes into play.

The Other Election

Like the U.S., Israel is holding an election this fall. Like U.S. politicians, Israeli politicians are grubbing for money. Unlike U.S. politicians, who are forbidden by law to accept money from foreign sources, Israeli pols will probably collect at least half their campaign money from fundraising tours in Israel West.

The Labour Party of Israel is an old hand at plucking dollars from the thick wallets of U.S. Jews. In May, Foreign Secretary Shimon Peres attended a dinner at the Los Angeles pleasure dome ($20 million purchase price) of billionaire Marvin Davis, in which the minimum donation per guest was $25,000. The roster of the more lavish U.S. contributors to Peres's Labour Party included CBS boss Laurence Tisch, Walt Disney boss Michael Eisner and Chicago Democratic wheelhorse Philip Klutznick.

Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir is also on an American money-grubbing tour, raking in as much as $100,000 per from Jewish fatcats eager to shoot the breeze with him at "intimate" private dinners.

Faced with two election campaigns taking place in the U.S. at the same time -- the American presidential race and the Israeli general election -- non-Jews in this country can only hope that the contributions to Jewish political parties in Israel are not tax-deductible.

Pure and Impure Hispanics

Hispanics are getting riled over who is an Hispanic. Negro- and Indian-tintured folk from Puerto Rico and Latin America claim American employers have been filling affirmative action job quotas with white Hispanics, that is, Latin Americans of pure or fairly pure Spanish descent. Such individuals, the argument runs, are really white and should not be allowed to "dilute" the Hispanic count, which should be entirely composed of nonwhites or mestizos.

To stress this point, a group of Hispanics in Texas has formally read Linda Chavez out of La Raza. Her father was too white an Hispanic and her mother was or is a Majority member.

The same group that de-Hispanicized Señora Chavez has demanded that the custody of the Alamo be turned over to an Hispanic organization. This demand came after the world premiere of a new movie about the Alamo produced a flurry of boycotts by Hispanics in Texas and elsewhere.

The boycotters want Mexicans, not Texans, to be the heroes of the siege. Hip hip for Santa Ana; abajo Davy Crockett!

Friends and Relations

Jesse Jackson's half-brother, Noah Robinson, a Chicago multimillionaire, who "made it" with Jesse's help, has been arrested for a grab bag of crimes, including conspiracy to commit murder. The target was allegedly Leroy "Hambone" Barber, a black mobster from Chicago, who was gunned down in South Carolina in 1986. Noah pyramided his millions by taking over "on the cheap" franchises of companies threatened with boycotts by Jesse.

Gus Hall, Angela Davis and the pathetic remnant of the once influential Communist Party USA are rooting for Jesse to be vice-president. The USSR's choice in the presidential race was Jackson, asserts Sergei Plekhanov, deputy director of Moscow's USA Institute. The Kremlin's second choice was Dukakis.

Hawaiian millionaire Fred Zeder, a good buddy of George Bush, is one of his regional finance chairmen and is in line for a cabinet post if George succeeds in moving into that Greek revival mansion at the end of Pennsylvania Avenue. While ambassador to Micronesia and on the U.S. payroll, Zeder accepted various "considerations" from a company that went bankrupt. Congress is looking into it.

Showbiz supporters of Bush include Frank Sinatra, Cheryl Ladd, Robert Stack, Tom Selleck and Helen Hayes. Showbiz Bushwhackers: Sally Fields, Oliver Stone (Platoon producer), Tony Randall, Leonard Nimoy, Richard Geer, Eddie Murphy, Hugh Hefner, Bill Cosby, Valerie Harper, Dennis Weaver.

John Battaglini is a Dukakis devotee and a crony. He is also a veteran Dukakis money-raiser. Does that have anything to do with the fact that the net sales in just two of the eight Massachusetts state college bookstores he has the exclusive contract to operate amounted to $3.3 million in fiscal 1987?

No Alma Pater

Dartmouth, the "free speech" college which suspends students for writing satires about a flim-flam black music professor, has made a further bow to minorities by changing the title of the college anthem from "Men of Dartmouth" to "Alma Mater," figuring no doubt that the Latin word for mother has nothing to do with gender, while the word "men" is both sexist and macho. The Dartmouth Indian, the college's long-honored mascot, was abolished more than a decade ago.

Word Twisters

One of the most debased and perverted words in American English these days is "exceptional," as in "exceptional children." The term is meant to encompass handicapped children, mental retards, idiots, nuts, criminals and whatnot. It also includes, probably to the great amusement of the social science professors who coined the verbal monstrosity, gifted children, thereby lumping the dumbest students with the brightest. Since practically all the federal, state and local money allocated to exceptional children is directed toward the lower end of the IQ scale, brainy kids have been penalized by being forced to sit in regular classes where they tend to yawn and lose interest in education after hearing their less brainy classmates taught for the fifth or sixth time what they -- the smart apples -- had easily grasped the first time around.

Better late than never, the Pennsylvania Supreme Court made a move last April to liberate gifted children from the educational doghouse. The learned judges ruled that run-of-the-mill enrichment programs for all students do not relieve schools from the obligation to provide special education for the gifted -- just as enrichment programs for the handicapped do not excuse schools from providing special classes for disadvantaged pupils. The court reasoned that since exceptional children have been defined as talented children, and since state law mandates exceptional children are to be given special education according to their needs, then intelligent children also have special needs -- one of them being accelerated courses in reading and math.

Less Than Noble Savages

The noble savage, living in idyllic innocence far from civilization, innately good, uncorrupted by the evil society of modern man, is one of the oldest and flakiest of human dreams. It's the Garden of Eden before the apple was bitten, and its main promoter was Jean-Jacques Rousseau, the eerily romantic Frenchman who abandoned his own five children, yet wrote Emile, considered to be the classic of in-house education. To stick another pin into the noble savage balloon, Professor Napoleon Chagnon, an anthropologist at the University of California at Santa Barbara, has done some work that reinforces an emerging consensus among anthropologists that violence is ever present in the most seemingly peaceful primitive societies.

For 25 years Chagnon has been visiting the Yanomamo Indians, a tribe that has existed for centuries in the vast tropical rain forests along the Brazilian-Venezuelan border. In a paper published in Science magazine, Chagnon reports an astonishingly violent streak in the 15,000 Yanomamos. When the males are not hunting animals or collecting honey, they are busy killing each other. Chagnon, acquiring his data from 12 villages that have had minimal contact with outsiders, concluded that 44% of the males over 25 had participated in a killing, that 30% of all male deaths were the result of violence, and that nearly 70% of all adults over 40 had had at least one close relative -- parent, spouse, sibling or child -- murdered. Most of the deaths had to do with sex: infidelity, attempted seduction of another's wife, abduction of women or failure to give a promised daughter in marriage.

Chagnon retreats into egalitarian ideology to explain Yanomamo behavior. He refuses to admit that the tribesmen have aggressive genes. He simply engages in a bout of circular reasoning -- a common habit of modern social scientists, by explaining that the strong will inevitably take advantage of the weak whenever it benefits them.

Chagnon is one more example of the distressing situation in which the discoverer of truth is compelled to expound on it untruthfully.

The anti-whitism of the Negro who created this cartoon is less than subtle. It is available from TomRe Enterprises, Pittsburgh, PA.

WASPISHLY YOURS

ONE OF THE MYSTERIES of Majority inactivism is why, given all the reverse discrimination and minority racism heaped upon us, there has never been a Majority backlash. Have we become a race of wimps? Is there nothing that will rouse us to action?

The only reasonable explanation seems to be that an effective Majority reaction would have to amount to essentially a revolution or counterrevolution, which in turn would demand the all-out support of a radicalized population. But people cannot be radicalized as long as they can eat their fill, as long as most have jobs, as long as most are able to enjoy the material comforts which, in this most materialistic of civilizations, they have come to consider absolute necessities of existence.

This obsession with tangibles bodes both well and ill for the future cataclysm that must precede our liberation and resurgence. As long as their standard of living is unaffected, Majority Americans have demonstrated time and again they are willing to put up with almost anything -- a corrupt government, a crime-inducing instead of a crime-reducing justice system, sewer-level art, literature and music, drug and homosexual subcultures, a minority-obeisant media and, finally, a perverted and perverse educational establishment.

All of the cultural requirements of a progressive, forward-moving evolutionary society are sidetracked for a new car, a TV with a bigger screen, an electric toothbrush, a trip to Disneyland and other trappings of a consumerism run amok.

But this blind attachment to and dependence on produce and consume is only a part of the reason for Majority do-nothingness. Charles Murray, whose book, Losing Ground, pointed out the counterproductive pitfalls of the stultifying welfare system, has written another eye-opener in In Pursuit of Happiness and Good Government (scheduled for fall publication by Simon & Schuster), which presents some equally original views on our attitudes toward crime.

Crime, Murray readily admits, is one of the great threats to the American social order. If anything should provoke Majority action or reaction, it should be the intolerable number of murders, rapes, robberies and other assorted acts of lawbreaking which have turned the U.S. into a sinkhole of random violence that would shock and dismay a Stone Age hunting band.

Why do we put up with it? Charles Murray gives us some thoughts that go beyond the omnibus materialistic explanation. Although our credit-card existence disarms us, so to speak, we meekly accept widespread lawbreaking, according to Murray, because it is largely localized and regionalized. As a result, those who could do most about it, the mediocrats, the top-ranking politicians and the moneymen, are relatively untouched by it.

Yes, crime haunts the suburbs, but compared to the number of murders, rapes and other violence in the big cities, it is negligible. It is city crime that has raised the national crime rate to astronomical heights. If the crime rate was based uniquely on wrongdoing in areas where Majority members predominate, it would not be much higher for the country as a whole than it was back in "civilized" times. The fact is, Murray asserts, "In 1980, fully one-half the population of the United States lived in the countryside or in a jurisdiction of less than 10,000 persons." Consequently, what disturbs Majority members most about crime is not the crimes themselves but the perception that the criminal justice system has broken down, that criminals are not punished enough, that judges are far too lenient, that lawyers are far too adept at getting the guilty off the hook.

It is this view of crime rather than direct experience with crime that angers the Majority -- and this view or perception, Murray asserts, is not enough, either by itself or in combination with the many other increasingly destructive elements of contemporary American life, to inspire a sizable number of Majority members to wage total war on crime.

All of this seems to be very true, as far as it goes. But Murray unfortunately leaves out one important factor in the equation -- the reporting of crime. The FBI in its Annual Crime Reports omits the statistics that show the increasing number of black-on-white crimes, particularly murder, forcible rape and armed robbery. A graphic depiction of racial crime, provided it was picked up and hammered on by the media, would certainly inspire some deep Majority thinking on the subject, especially since more and more lawbreaking consists of minority assaults on the Majority.

Whenever a white commits a racially motivated crime against a black, the event receives far more media attention than a similar crime committed by a black against a white. (Remember the amount of time and space the newspapers and television lavished on Howard Beach and Bernhard Goetz?)

It is this deliberate overemphasis of Majority crime and deliberate underplaying of minority crime (blacks commit eight times more crimes against whites than whites commit against blacks) that helps to keep the Majority in the dark about the true nature of much of today's crime. Covering up the fact that an increasing number of nonwhite criminals are using crime as their way of attacking whites as a race weakens Majority resistance, for the simple reason that the Majority is not able to obtain accurate information on what is happening on the crime front. When you don't know what your enemy is doing, when you don't know what motivates him, when you don't know his intentions, you are asking for defeat.

We will never begin to stop crime until the media provide us with honest reporting on the homicides, rapes and other violent acts being committed by minorities not only against the public at large, but specifically against the Majority. Until we come to realize that the battle against crime is only one aspect of the larger battle for our survival, both crime and our dispossession will stay in high gear.

Ponderable Quote

What was there about the Americans that made them so obviously only that? The gradual mongrelization of that dismaying country by the mingling of the steerage sweepings of Europe and the blacks had resulted only in a mediocrity of feature and mind impossible to describe!

Frau Rittersdorf
in Ship of Fools,
an allegorical novel by
Katherine Anne Porter

Notes from the Sceptred Isle - John Nobull

One could argue as to who was the greatest philosopher of the last hundred years. My money would be on Alfred Whitehead, whose Adventures of Ideas (1933), written while he was at Harvard, advances the doctrines of Plato's Timaeus and cosmology from Galileo to Locke (i.e. pre-Kantian philosophy in terms of modern science). His organic approach must surely have influenced Raymond Cattell.

Be that as it may, there is not much doubt as to who was the most influential philosopher of the past hundred years. It was Martin Heidegger (1889-1976), whose Sein und Zeit (1927) was the foundation of existentialism. Sartre and Camus were just a couple of those who were deeply influenced by his seminal thought. (Sartre developed his ideas in wartime Paris, where censorship was light and more than twice as many books were printed as in London and New York put together.)

Until recently, the official view was that Heidegger, as Rector of Freiburg University, unfortunately allowed himself to become a member of the Nazi Party in 1933, but resigned his rectorship in the following year because he felt he had been guilty of a political error. After the war, his atheism proved useful in counteracting the influence of Christians, some of whom, at that time, were rather to the right in their thinking.

But now a forthcoming book by one Victor Farias, Heidegger et le nazisme, has put the cat among the pigeons -- not only in France. Farias, who got to know Heidegger while studying philosophy at Freiburg in the 1960s, was shocked when Heidegger told him that only the German language had the power to convey philosophy. Instead of taking this as an understandable example of cultural myopia (in view of the very great contribution of the Germans to European philosophy), Farias made it the starting point for his "investigation" of Heidegger when he gloatingly discovered that the philosopher had been a "dues-paying member of the Nazi party in good standing until 1945" (Time, 15/2/1988). What is more, Heidegger frequently praised the Führer and signed many of his letters, including personal ones, with "Heil Hitler." Worst of all, he was silent about the Nazi period during the remainder of his life.

French Jews are all in a flutter. André Glucksmann, a onetime Marxist, asks, "Has Heidegger poisoned us?", while a certain Alain Finkielkraut (what a fine old French name!) comes out with the judgment: "The horror of Nazism is only an alibi for the mistrust of philosophy." (That could be taken in two ways!) As for the literary critics in the U.S., whose work is permeated with Heidegger's thoughts, they are rushing to mend their fences.

It's not going to be all that easy. After all, conventional wisdom (aided by countless publications) claims that the Nazis were so anti-intellectual that they rejected all philosophy -- and here is one of the foremost philosophers of the twentieth century, certainly the most influential, demonstrating his support for Nazism. I tell you, it's scary! Well, at least it will help to increase the guilt feelings among goy liberals -- they thrive on that.

* * *

Perhaps the most intelligent international economic publication is the International Currency Review, edited by Christopher Story (108 Horseferry Road, London SW1P 2EF), which has a very neat way of summing up the economies of different countries in terms of their currencies, and which also includes articles on major issues, usually written by the editor, in which he is not afraid to make predictions. These predictions, especially with regard to the ballooning debt burden caused by excessive and irresponsible lending to incompetent Third World governments, have often -- indeed, usually -- been fulfilled.

The December issue of the International Currency Review (pp. 140-146) featured an article on "The Ghosts of Crashes Past," which contains some tentative prophecy very likely indeed of fulfilment. It begins by suggesting that believers in Fibonacci Numbers, the Elliott Wave and Kondratieff's theory may very well be right in thinking that last October's crash on the stock markets heralds a very severe period of recession, and goes on to predict certain likely consequences.

To begin with, money may well increase in value, so that governments will be tempted to resort to hyperinflation in order to decrease the value of their disbursements in the form of interest on bonds, etc. (As the article rightly says, hyperinflation "is in fact concealed deflation.") However, this temptation will probably be resisted to some extent, because it would destroy the taxing powers of the governments concerned.

The area least affected by the slump will probably be Europe. "The American and Soviet armed forces in Europe will be reduced and ultimately withdrawn -- rather as the Allied armies of occupation were withdrawn from the Rhineland in 1930." France and Germany, alarmed by the tendency toward disarmament, which leaves them very much at the mercy of Soviet conventional forces, "are forming a powerful new axis" (including an integrated military force). Britain and Italy have staged useful economic recoveries, and the other countries stand to benefit from the trend toward European integration. However, something will have to be done for a basket case like the Republic of Ireland.

"Serious trouble" is predicted for the inner cities of Britain: "In the 30s the unemployed were ex-soldiers or their younger brothers -- used to hard conditions and loyal to the system, and the population was homogeneous. In the 90s, there will be vast resentment at cuts in social services; and unemployed 'ethnics' will probably resort to violence."

What a commentary on the wisdom of permitting mass coloured immigration since the war! Of course, our politicians and media spokesmen claim that it all just happened, that nobody could have foreseen the consequences, and that we just have to grin and bear it, whether we like it or not. However, I remember that, at least until Enoch Powell had a change of heart in the early 60s, Mosley was the only public figure to speak out against mass immigration. For his pains, he and his supporters were subjected to an hysterical campaign of Jewish vituperation and violence.

Of course, Story cannot openly say what is implied in his forecast. All he can do is predict "a Civilian Conservation Corps" set up "to provide young people with work." Just what useful work young blacks with an average IQ of 80 will be capable of, he does not specify. As for his prediction that the ridiculous Sir Geoffrey Howe will come forward as "The Great Healer" to replace Mrs. Thatcher, we can treat it with the contempt it deserves. I mean that even if Howe does take over, he won't be able to find any solution. The only solution which could possibly work is Mosley's compensated repatriation, and that is not even being considered.

Next, "The plight of Latin America will intensify, and the severity of poverty on that continent will assume quite unacceptable proportions." Exactly what relief measures will be enacted to deal with this "unacceptable" situation at a time of global slump, he does not explain. Story also predicts that Africa risks slipping further back into the Middle Ages, and the dreams of the self-serving elites which lined their collective pockets when the European colonial nations handed power over to them will not be realised. Indeed, many of these nation states could decay and perhaps disintegrate.

South Africa will survive, despite the Soviet Union's determined conspiracy to assume hegemony over the region because Moscow covets South Africa's gold and base metal resources. This is because gold will continue to be in strong demand, given that numerous states, unable to finance their economies, will resort to hyperinflation, as is happening today.

As for Israel, "it cannot continue to exist without large-scale U.S. assistance. This will be provided, but increasingly unwillingly."

Story's analysis of the situation in the Persian Gulf also carries conviction. He says that the powers concerned are anxious to keep open routes for the export of oil to Japan to prevent the appreciation of the dollar in terms of the yen, which would occur in the event of oil supplies to Japan from the area being severed or disrupted. At the same time, the Western presence in the Gulf remains an implied threat to Japan. The Western powers are signalling that, in the event of excessive Japanese intransigence over trade, they have the power to inflict the gravest conceivable economic damage on the Japanese economy.

If this analysis is correct -- and I think it is, then it is in our interest to signal to Japan that a resurrection of Majority power in the West would be accompanied by a willingness to divide the world into co-prosperity spheres, under the leadership of the most viable economies. Japan, which is rapidly overtaking the United States as the world's principal creditor, would be in a position decisively to influence the struggle in our favour.

Most interesting of all is the concluding part of Story's article: "The Soviet Union and the United States are both now threatened with progressively destabilizing forces, which could lead to a degree of disintegration." The USSR "is clearly in the grip of fissiparous forces, as recent disturbances in the Crimea, Latvia and elsewhere have shown." The Afghan war is taking its toll, and the financial burden of the armed forces is becoming intolerable (hence glasnost).

Nor is the U.S. faced with much better prospects:

The financial difficulties of the United States . . . will become insupportable for all elements of society. The U.S. Treasury may encounter increasing difficulty in marketing its debt. The ordinary American, deprived of the good life and forced to become considerably poorer, will demonstrate an unaccustomed degree of fractiousness.

German and Japanese bankers may well be in a position to dictate terms to the U.S. Treasury and the Federal Reserve. Attempts to reduce deficit spending may not meet with success in view of the "underlying recessionary drag."

More cheering is Story's prediction of "a rejection of welfarism -- which encourages the aspirations of economically incompetent groups and the continuing immigration of millions of people who have no "work ethic" tradition. At a further extreme, but pursuing such thinking to its logical conclusion, the north and midwest states might even begin to encourage the secession of the United States' most Hispanic areas [in line with the proposals of Instaurator's editor]."

Of course, the media will make it their business, as always, to prevent such thinking being carried to its logical conclusion, but this may prove a more and more difficult task, because mindless "optimism" may well be undermined.

The most serious casualty of the Nightmare Nineties may be that general optimism about human nature which has prevailed since the French Revolution, when the lessons of history were downgraded, and the superior wisdom of modern man extolled. It may, who knows, ultimately be concluded that the myth of "one man, one vote" democracy may have been worth trying, but was not really much of a success.

If such views are being disseminated in a highly influential journal (however restricted its readership), it may well be time for us to start considering what we are going to do as the crisis -- which means no more and no less than a parting of the ways -- becomes more manifest.

I presumed the worst, but I erred. HBO's $2.7 million production, The Trial of Waldheim (first broadcast June 5) was a good lesson to all of us who are locked into the idea that we live in an age when the media, especially television, are singlemindedly skewed in the antiwhite, anti-German, minority-puffing direction.

Surprisingly, the HBO "trial," formally dubbed "A Commission of Inquiry," wasn't fixed, although there were the usual eloquent insinuations, the ad hominem and the Pavlovian acceptance that Nazis were the most evil creatures that ever walked the earth -- not Homo sapiens but an entirely different breed, Homo monstrosus.

The prosecution's case was not overpowering, since it rested almost entirely on the innuendo and hearsay which dominated the media scene from the moment Austrian leftists launched their polemics against Waldheim in the 1986 Austrian presidential election. The slander was then picked up by the World Jewish Congress, which is always ready to blow another toot on the anti-Nazi horn.

When the issue is anti-Nazism, innuendoes and ad hominem are usually enough to win any argument in or out of court. We have only to look at the verdicts of the Nuremberg and post-Nuremberg trials. So it warmed the cockles of my heart to see a panel of five seemingly fair-minded judges from several countries preventing the proceedings from sinking into the conventional legal quagmire of wild charges and minority racist pitches.

Lord Rawlinson, the defense counsel, kept things on an even legal keel by trying to adhere strictly to the law. Conversely, Allan A. Ryan Jr., the video prosecutor, relied on a meandering, hit-and-prevaricate strategy based largely on pejoratives instead of evidence. Ryan, a professional Nazi basher and first director of the Justice Department's warlock-hunting OSI, is now making a small fortune writing and lecturing on the menacing and threatening presence of a few old men who go like sheep to slaughter when, ignoring every last principle of international and domestic justice, the U.S. sends them without benefit of jury trial to their deaths on a Communist gallows or in one of those Soviet "hospitals."

Ryan probably thought he would sail through the television show, pick up another piece of large change and win more applause from servile TV critics -- and perhaps from his wife, who is the daughter of a Czechoslovak (religion and race unspecified). But it didn't turn out that way. The judges ruled that nothing had been presented to prove beyond a reasonable doubt that Waldheim had any call to stand trial for war crimes. Case dismissed.

Have we reached the point in the declining graph of this country that a television trial is more honest than the real McCoy? Perhaps we have. If so, it might be time to follow up the TV trial of Waldheim with one of Menahem Begin, a real war criminal. Instead of being put on a watch list, Begin was given the red carpet treatment whenever he visited the U.S. to rake in more millions of dollars for his technically bankrupt racist state.

* * *

In the old days American millionaires made their piles by building things -- automobiles, railroads, mining and steel companies and the like. Today the big money is going to corporate raiders and showbizzers. Producers such as Aaron Spelling and actors such as Bill Cosby are accumulating hundreds of millions of dollars putting on inane, tasteless soap operas like "Charlie's Angels" or bland sitcoms in which blacks act like upper-middle class whites. A "hot" scriptwriter can get as much as $100,000 for one TV pilot. Michael Leeson, who co-authored the pilot for The Cosby Show, has received $1 million as a result of writing those 40 pages. Benjamin Stein wrote in Playboy (Feb. 1988) that one TV mogul got $30 million recently for his interest in Norman Lear's TV empire, although he had never written or directed one episode of a Lear sitcom.

A semi-literate TV writer with a few scripts under his belt these days will get $45,000 for an ordinary half-hour script. A staff writer and supervising producer for a successful sitcom (Cheers, for example) will make $500,000 a year if he gets six scripts on the air. The author of a one-hour script for Falcon Crest will make his half-million if he can get a producer's credit thrown in.

The creator of a successful sitcom can make as much as $50 million, while the executive producer of a series can pull down between $20,000 and $40,000 per episode, as does the director. A plain, down-on-his-luck producer collects $10,000 to $15,000 per half-hour episode. Story editors make $10,000 and up per week. The writer of a half-hour show that's a total bomb is paid $12,000, plus $3,600 for a rerun.

The worst part about these "obscene" payments is that they are made to people who are the pits of modern civilization, as conclusively proved by their products. They have little taste, less style and practically no brains. All they have is an instinct for turning out sexual slop and minority-tilted swill. Their philosophic and artistic world is limited to sneaking in political messages that Russians are not so bad and Germans and Arabs are very bad, that Jews are heroic sufferers and WASPs are cringing bullies, and that businessmen and Southerners still play the Paleolithic card.

What kind of a world is it when the man in charge of a cretinous, barnyard-level sitcom can make for his few hours' or few days' work more than a school teacher makes in a lifetime?

Talking Numbers

1,679 Postal Police Officers, an armed phalanx of the Postal Service, are on hand to help allay the pervasive fears of letter carriers in urban no-man's lands.

#

8-year-old Keshia Pulliam, The Cosby Show's precocious pickaninny, is paid $230,000 a year for being cute. The parents of Brian Bonsall, 6, collect $210,000 per annum for his making with the grown-up jokes on Family Ties. Jewish agents' commissions have been tactfully omitted from the above figures.

#

Latest percentage breakdown of U.S. religious sects: Jews 2.3%, Roman Catholics 35%, "Moderate Protestants" 24.2%, conservative Protestants 15.8%, black Protestants 9.1%, liberal Protestants 8.7%, "no religious preference" 6.9%. Doubtless many of these religionists have seldom or never seen the inside of a church or synagogue. Courtesy of kinky Jimmy Swaggart and the freakish Bakkers, God's houses are now somewhat less populated.

#

In February, funnymen on 3 late-night NBC-TV shows told twice as many jokes about Republican candidates as they did about the Demos. Jesse Jackson, untouchable until the New York primary, was on the receiving end of 4 barbs; George Bush, 52.

#

6,174 monks and nuns were given 32,016 years in jail in Czechoslovakia in the last 2 or 3 years of Commi-czar Stalin's paranoid reign over Eastern Europe. 100,000 Czechs and Slovaks were sent to 350 labor camps; 278 Party bigwigs were liquidated. Foreign Minister Jan Masaryk was defenestrated by the Red purgers before they themselves were purged.

#

An Austrian Gallup Poll (Feb. 1, 1988) indicated that 72% of the Austrian population wanted President Waldheim to stay put. 78% did not buy the Jewish-inspired charges that he was a war criminal. But 64% had the gut feeling that he knew about "war crimes" in the Balkans.

#

The 3 top U.S. corporate earners in 1987 were two Italian Americans, Lotus software boss Jim P. Manzi ($26,297,000) and Lee Iacocca of Chrysler ($17,896,000) and one Jewish American, Paul Fireman of Reebok sneakers ($15,424,000). Come to think of it, Manzi looks more Jewish than Italian.

London has 273 underground stations and 241 miles of track; New York City, 458 subway stations and 230 miles of track. Some 14,000 muggings and other criminal offenses are perpetrated yearly in Zoo City's filthy, graffiti-splotched grottoes, nearly 9 times the number of crimes in the London underground.

#

A Time poll (Jan. 27-28, 1988) found 56% of non-Jews and 39% of Jews would like to see a Palestinian homeland, and 35% of non-Jews and 10% of Jews in favor of reducing U.S. aid because of Israel's mishandling of the Palestinian uprising. A Louis Harris poll showed 73% public disapproval of Israel's brass-knuckle reaction to the turmoil in the occupied territories. But the Harris Poll also reported 26% of non-Jews and 48% of Jews thought the American media were biased against Israel in their coverage of events in the West Bank and Gaza.

#

6 of the 27 Cubans who had AIDS have been done in by the disease. 174 Cubans (59 faggots, 57 women and 58 heterosexual men) have been tabbed as carriers. The incidence of the virus was nearly 40 times higher among the people in the 1980 Mariel boatlift than in the Cuban population at large. As many as 20,000 Marielitos were homos, some having been picked up by the Cuban police for attending all-male daisy-chain parties. AIDS was probably imported by soldiers rotated home from the Cuban expeditionary forces sent to Angola in the late 1970s.

#

Norman Lear, whose Jewish father was the role model for Archie Bunker in TV's All in the Family, had to shell out $110 million to get a divorce from his wife of 29 years. But he still has enough millions left to be one of the major contributors to the Democratic Party. Lear's People for the American Way was probably as responsible as any other group for killing Bork's nomination to the Supreme Court.

In 1987, U.S. companies spent $350 million on advertising aimed specifically at blacks, compared to $490 million spent on Hispanic-targeted ads. Black huckstering budgets increased by only 2% last year, while Hispanic ad expenditures shot up 23%. Black agencies complain white businesses aren't paying enough attention to the $200-billion-a-year black consumer market. White admen retort that black consumers can be reached adequately by omniracial advertising, whereas the $134-billion-a-year Hispanic market needs special handling, primarily because of the language gulf. Proctor & Gamble plans to spend $5 million of its $1.5 billion advertising budget on black ads this year; $20 million on Hispanic pitches.

#

After snooping into the past of 450 supposed war criminals in Australia, "substantial" cases have been developed against 15 unidentified persons alleged to have been involved in multiple murders. So half a century after the fact, Australia may soon be staging a "son of Nuremberg" trial. The peace and quiet of a few old geezers will be sacrificed to the Jewish mania for lex talionis and worse. Needless to mention, no Israelis who have moved to Australia are being investigated for the crimes they may well have committed against Palestinians.

#

Moscow mothers are collecting fertility bonuses -- 50 rubles ($80) for the first child, 100 rubles for #2, plus the promise of a new apartment within five years. Last year the birthrate in the Soviet Union was 19.9/1,000, up from 17/1,000 in 1986. Due to regulations introduced to encourage bigger families in the early 1980s, birthrates have been rising in 11 out of 15 Soviet republics, including the Russian Republic, the power center of the dominant but demographically worried Soviet population group.

#

Negro AIDS percentages in the U.S.: 54% of all child carriers; 90% of newborn carriers; 50% of homosexual and bisexual males; 43% of drug addicts; 72% of heterosexuals. (Surgeon General C. Everett Koop, Feb. 24, 1988)

Soldiers Killed in Two World Wars

Country	1914-1918	1939-1945
France	1,363,000	202,000
Germany	2,037,000	3,250,000
Great Britain	723,000	557,000
Italy	460,000	149,000
Japan	---	1,507,000
Russia/USSR	1,700,000	7,500,000
United States	126,000	292,000
Worldwide	8,418,000	16,933,000

In 1850 the U.S. prison inmate rate was 29/100,000; in 1940, 120/100,000. The rate then declined to under 100 by 1970. A steady increase since then produced an all-time high in 1986 of 220/100,000. Some 570,519 persons were in prison as of June 30, 1987, California having the most -- 67,000. This latter figure is expected to top 100,000 within the next 5 years. (National Council on Crime and Delinquency, April 1988)

#

The wedding of Laura Steinberg, daughter of corporate raider Saul Steinberg, and Jonathan Tisch, son of Preston R. Tisch of Loew's Inc., cost $3 million and included a 10-foot high wedding cake with an apricot-Grand Marnier filling and a price tag of $17,000.

#

It has not been much bruited about, but an estimated 1,600 illegal Israeli immigrants have applied for amnesty under the 1986 U.S. Immigration Act.

#

7 out of 10 females (age 15 to 24) living in London worry that sooner or later they will be raped. 64% of women of all ages fear going out at night alone. Nevertheless, 45,500 immigrants, a sizable number from the West Indies, were welcomed into Britain last year. (Reader's Digest poll in Britain)

"Emperor Hadrian . . . slew 80,000 myriads of human beings at Bethar." So states the Talmud's Midrash Rabbah (Soncino Press, London, 1939, p. 157). A myriad is 10,000. The human beings were Jews and Bethar was a town in ancient Israel.

#

17 million persons, 80% of them civilians, are said to have died in armed conflicts since the end of WWII. 5.5 million soldiers from 41 countries are busy fighting today's wars. (UN Secretary General Perez de Cuellar, April 20, 1988)

#

Volkswagen sales in 1987 were $32 billion worldwide. 21 million Bugs (the French call them Ladybugs) have been built since May 26, 1938, when Hitler laid the first stone of the automobile company's manufacturing complex at Wolfsburg in Lower Saxony. The Bug is still coming off a Mexican assembly line at the rate of 100 a day.

#

Of the 241 Marines killed in the Beirut barracks bombing in 1983, 78 were Catholics, 64 Baptists, 2 Episcopalians and 2 Presbyterians. No other denomination had a death toll greater than 16. Not one Jew, Quaker or Unitarian died in the massacre. (Maury Maverick, columnist, San Antonio Express-News)

Since March 1985, Israel has hijacked 13 ships in the eastern Mediterranean. 3 of them flew Panamanian, Honduran and Australian flags. The other 10 were small unflagged fishing vessels that belonged to owners in Israel's neighboring states. More than 100 persons were abducted in the course of these piratical operations. (Palestine Perspectives, March/April 1988)

#

The $2 billion-a-year Israeli tourist business is falling on bad times -- down 40% to 50% from a year ago. News of the steep decline came at the same time the Zionist state reported a $3.2 billion trade deficit for 1987. Even worse, the Israeli government announced that army operations to combat and contain the Palestinian uprising have drained an extra $500 million from the military budget.

#

Israel has been awarded contracts totaling $124 million for research on the Strategic Defense Initiative (Star Wars) -- more money than 34 states and all other foreign nations have received for participating in SDI development programs.

#

The 6,500 square-foot, $2.5 million Bel Air mansion the Reagans will move into in January should rent for about $15,000 a month. It is doubtful that the new tenants will pay that much.

Primate Watch

Rev. SUN MYUNG MOON, owner of the "conservative" Washington Times, claims that a witch-doctor from Zimbabwe is the miraculous reincarnation of his son, Heung Jim Nim, who was killed in an auto accident in 1984. Heung's body was shipped back to Korea for a "corpse marriage" with the daughter of Bo Hi Pak, a top executive of Moon's media empire. Despite all the religious claptrap and necrophilia, ARNAUD de BORCHGRAVE, editor of the Times, RICHARD W. VIGUERIE, W. CLEON SKOUSEN and other leading "right-wing" luminaries continue to feed at the Moon trough.

☆ ☆ ☆

In March, MARIE LUISA DIAS, who lives in the Bronx, tossed her two-month-old son out of a third-story window. Mother was annoyed by his crying. Although he fell on a brick deck, the baby's condition in the hospital was reported as "good." Señora Dias has been charged with attempted murder. (For a similar case in Miami, see Instauration, Dec. 1987, p. 30)

This year's winner of the ADL's International Humanitarian Award was OTTO HABSBURG, largely for his opportunistic opposition to the UN's resolution equating Zionism with racism.

☆ ☆ ☆

DOV LEVIN, a former Jewish terrorist and the primus inter pares of the three Israeli judges who sentenced John Demjanjuk to death, is in the U.S. on a fundraising trip.

☆ ☆ ☆

He was JFK's head of the IRS, but now MORTIMER CAPLIN is being squeezed instead of squeezing. He has been charged with underpaying his tax bill by $228,451!

☆ ☆ ☆

During the visit of Rev. JOSE KURUTHURUKULANGARA of India to a New Jersey Catholic Church, he took time out from his religious duties, according to police, to sexually assault a seven-year-old white girl.

He was all over the front pages when he couldn't get into the University of Florida law school, though he tried four times. After years of media complaints of racial discrimination, the Florida Bar waived the standard requirement of passing the state bar exam and gave black VIRGIL HAWKINS the right to practice law. The headlines were not so big, however, when Hawkins had to resign from the bar after being arrested for embezzling $15,000. Hawkins died last February. Now Negro groups are demanding that he be rehabilitated and be posthumously readmitted to the bar.

☆ ☆ ☆

Dr. MICHAEL WEINBERGER of West Palm beach was fined $10,000 by the Florida Medical Board for slapping a coke-sniffing patient who was shot in the chest, calling him a "creep" and "pond scum" and telling him, "You are going to die and I don't care."

☆ ☆ ☆

After Mona Pierre refused to hand over the money, A BLACK THUG squirted gasoline into her subway ticket booth and applied a match. Mona died of burns a few hours later.

The supposedly non-AIDS death in March of the 42-year-old transvestite freak, HARRIS G. MILSTEAD, also known as Divine, was big news, but nothing was said of his Jewish background. In his first movie, Eat Your Makeup, Divine was a sadist who couldn't resist beating up fashion models; in Multiple Maniacs he was raped by a giant lobster; in Female Trouble, playing the part of a half-man, half-woman, he made love to himself (herself) in a pile of garbage; in Pink Flamingos he ate dog dung and smacked his lips. Quite a distinguished film career!

☆ ☆ ☆

Black racism is hotting up in the United Auto Workers. The UAW head at Chrysler, MARC STEPP, has been accused of pushing for the transfer of most of the production from the Chrysler plant at Kenosha (WI), which has an 85% white work force, to the company's Jefferson Avenue plant in Detroit (65% minority work force). He is definitely opposed to a transfer in the opposite direction.

☆ ☆ ☆

A band of 30 TO 40 TRANSVESTITE BURGLARS is working Florida's east coast, shoplifting during the day and breaking into women's clothing boutiques at night. All of the drag queens are on cocaine. Because they alternately dress as men and women, cops find it particularly difficult to nab them.

☆ ☆ ☆

WILLIAM L. SHIRER, one of America's leading WWII warmongers, who made a small fortune writing tours de force of anti-Germanism, has married his third wife, Irina Freund, his 49-year-old Russian teacher, who lived most of her life in Moscow. Shirer is 84. His first wife was Theresa Stiberitz; his second, Martha Pelton. Shirer's latest marriage took place in Lenox (MA). When asked who performed the ceremony, he refused to answer.

☆ ☆ ☆

The State Department's fix-it lawyer, ABRAHAM SOFAER, an Egyptian-born Jew, has been accused by the Israeli government of illegally removing priceless antiques, including valuable ancient coins, to the U.S.

☆ ☆ ☆

Rabbi MARTIN BERKOWICH, the ring-leader, has been indicted with 23 others, including two Baptist ministers, for running a fraudulent $2 million tax shelter operation.

CHUCK BERRY, a black Rock 'n' Roll Hall of Fame member, failed to appear for the second time in a Zoo City court to answer charges that he had a punchout with Marilyn Boeteler, after which her face required five stitches. Ms. Boeteler was described as a very "handsome woman" and a "beautiful blonde." A reform school graduate, Berry was arrested in 1959 for transporting a 14-year-old Hispanic prostitute across state lines.

☆ ☆ ☆

Married and the father of four, Reverend Congressman FLOYD FLAKE of the African Methodist Episcopal Church in Buffalo (NY) has been accused of sexual harassment by Thelma Singleton-Scott, his one-time Girl Friday. At present Flake is under investigation for misuse of a $3.5 million federal housing subsidy awarded his church.

☆ ☆ ☆

In June an unidentified man committed suicide by leaping from a room at the Hayward Hotel in downtown Los Angeles. As soon as his body hit the street, PASSERSBY started picking the dead man's pockets.

☆ ☆ ☆

OTIS WILLIAMS and THREE OTHER BLACKS were arrested by the FBI in May in the midst of stealing $70 million from the First National Bank of Chicago. They almost pulled off one of the biggest computer scams to date. The bank had hired Williams as part of its affirmative action program.

☆ ☆ ☆

The mastermind of the Wedtech scandal, FRED NEUBERGER, denied in court that he had arranged the disappearance of his third wife, who vanished into thin air in 1986. He admitted, however, that he had set up a joint bank account with his mistress only a few weeks later. Neuberger had earlier testified he had plotted to kill John Mariotta, the Hispanic frontman whose presumed majority interest in Wedtech had allowed the company to get minority set-aside contracts.

☆ ☆ ☆

In an attempt to get JOEL STEINBERG, the accused killer of Lisa, his illegally adopted blonde six-year-old child, out on bail, his friends (mostly Jews) have written 15 letters to the judge in charge of the case. Some described Joel as a "charming young man" and "a loving father." One letter blamed the murder on Hedda Nussbaum, whom Steinberg used as a punching bag. Hedda was accused of attacking Lisa while under the spell of an S&M cult.

On Friday (Mar. 18, 1988), LAWRENCE R. GREMMINGER was arrested in Santa Clara (CA) on a rape charge. On Saturday he posted $10,000 bail and walked out of jail. Three hours later he was rearrested after he had broken into a house, pointed a gun at a 46-year-old housewife and forced her to perform a sex act.

☆ ☆ ☆

The New York Times Book Review (Mar. 6, 1988) praised Assata: An Autobiography by ASSATA SHAKUR, as "a deftly written book of autobiography and poetry," and forgave the author for spelling America "Amerika," Rockefeller "Rockafella," court as "kourt" and for the multiple use of the lower-case "i" in the affected manner of e.e. cummings. Assata Shakur is the nom de plume of convicted cop killer JOANNE CHESIMARD, who holed up in Cuba after escaping from a U.S. jail and is revered as a sort of black Joan of Arc by some members of the Jesse Jackson crowd. The profits from her book should, but probably won't, go to the family of the policeman she murdered.

☆ ☆ ☆

It was all rather distasteful. STEPHEN HAWKE, the son of Australian Prime Minister Bob Hawke, stormed out of his first TV interview when the questions got too warm for comfort. Visibly annoyed when asked if he had fathered two children with an Abo woman, Stephen blew up at the allusion that he had to make appointments to see his father. Two hours later he returned to the TV station and announced, "If I was married or living with an Aboriginal woman and had Aboriginal children, then I'd acknowledge them proudly." At present Stephen is employed as the "adviser" to Aborigines in the Kimberly region of Western Australia. It appears Australians have an incipient FDR Jr. on their hands.

☆ ☆ ☆

Although she lived, ate and exercised her bodily functions on a crowded street in Zoo City's high-rent Upper East Side, JOYCE BROWN, after a brief stint in a mental hospital, gave lectures at Harvard and other equally brain-dead institutions. Nevertheless, in March, the obstreperous Negress was back on the streets panhandling and yelling obscenities at passersby.

☆ ☆ ☆

MILTON JONES, 18, a black high-school dropout who needed some capital to become a big-time drug peddler, was found guilty of robbing and murdering two Catholic priests in Buffalo (NY).

☆ ☆ ☆

Who originated, promoted and sold the idea of a televised IRVING BERLIN 100th birthday party to be held at Carnegie Hall on May 11? None other than Irv himself!

Canada. The legal hounding of non-Jews who happen to disagree with the Jewish party line (no racism for anybody but Jews) is almost becoming a game. You lose one and you win one. The seditious conspiracy trial in Fort Smith (AR) ended with a not-guilty verdict for all concerned. The Zündel trial in Canada wound up with a nine-month sentence for the German crusader who refuses to buy the Holocaust story. Next came the appeal of the Keegstra trial. The guilty verdict was overturned by the Alberta Court of Appeals. After years of harassment by the press, after three full-length films about him -- films that automatically assumed his guilt -- he wasn't guilty at all. He should get back his $5,000 fine and his massive legal expenses. He should get back his teacher's job and his mayor's job. He should get back his good name. But will he? And will he be allowed to share with students his skeptical views of the Holocaust? If he were recompensed in full, that would be true justice. But justice is the odd man out in these times for people who dare to criticize Jewry.

Jews may force Canadian prosecutors to carry the Keegstra case up another notch to the country's Supreme Court in the hope of obtaining a reversal of the reversal. In the meantime, a Canadian court, by vindicating Keegstra, has landed a hard blow against Canada's hate laws, which have been deliberately devised to stifle Majority criticism of minorities, but not vice versa.

Europe. West Germany has some 4.4 million foreigners, 600,000 of them Turks, yet the only political party that is firmly anti-immigrant, the National Democrats, has not one seat in the Bundestag. A recent poll showed that 85% of the Dutch want a limit on immigration, but the only right-wing party in Holland lost its one seat in Parliament in the 1986 election. In Britain neither the National Front nor the British National Party has been able to elect one MP. Italy has 750,000 illegal and 100,000 legal immigrants, most of them from North Africa and the Mediterranean littoral. Yet the immigration issue didn't play any part in the recent elections and was largely ignored by the one important right-wing party, the Italian Social Movement. France's National Front has lost all but one of its 33 seats in the National Assembly through a change in the electoral system, even though at least 14.4% of Frenchmen approve of Jean-Marie Le Pen's politics. In Switzerland, which has 24,000 asylum seekers and where one-quarter of the work force is foreign, the government itself has taken scarcely any effective measures to reduce immigration, though in one canton, Thurgau, an anti-immigrant party did manage to garner 10% of the vote.

The most interesting anti-immigration news comes from Scandinavia. The Progress Party in Denmark increased its share of the vote to 9% in the May election and boosted its number of delegates in Parliament from nine to 16. In Norway, the Norwegian Progress Party is now scoring 18-23% support in opinion polls.

But the story is different in Sweden, where a new law makes it a criminal offense to speak disparagingly about minorities. A person who did just that, the publisher and chairman of a community broadcasting association, was sentenced last March to two months in jail and his broadcasting license withdrawn for one year.

Although it has nothing to do directly with immigration, the following item has a lot to do with the racial makeup of Sweden. A research team in Stockholm has found that functional spermatozoa in the semen of Swedish men in the 30-year range has fallen from 57% to 37%. Norwegian men of the same age had only 32% functional sperm, compared to 73% twenty years ago. The decline was attributed to a combination of urban living, air pollution, stress, environmental poisoning and radioactivity.

Britain. From a subscriber. Robert Maxwell, the press and publishing millionaire, has bought The Mail on Sunday, Scotland's largest weekend newspaper. What's more, he has started a series of colorful booklets on Scottish history, explaining that the contents make him proud to bear a Scots name. He does not mention that his Scots name came out of his head. His Czech-Jewish parents named him Jan Hoch.

* * *

After spending nearly a year in Cornwall, which has one of the largest unemployment and lowest crime rates in the country, and where I found a great deal of "Instaurationist" feeling, I wonder why the British radical right makes no attempt to capitalize on it. Even if, as claimed by the government, only 45,000 immigrants entered Britain last year (the estimate does not include EEC countries like Eire), the number is still much greater than the population of the largest Cornish town. Unemployment in Cornwall is partly due to the large number of immigrants in the cities and larger towns of immigrants in the cities and larger towns of country or "upalong," as they say in the local district.

The radical right seems to cling to the excitement of the big cities. Attempts are being made in several places to stop celebrations of the Glorious Revolution of 1688 on the grounds the National Front supports it. In fact, the official National Front, now dominated by Irish-Italian Catholics, supports an independent Ulster. The organization is far from joining any festivities that would honor the memory of William of Orange.

* * *

Drag acts are very popular in London pubs. Almost without exception, the performers are Irish, despite such names as "Danny La Rue." The predilection of Ould Sodders for wearing women's clothes seems to go back a long way. The custom of boys wearing petticoats until puberty was widespread in Ireland and was practiced in Connemara in the 1920s.

Until recently the Irish Republic was one of the few European countries where the birthrate exceeded the replacement level. Now, however, massive emigration has started again and the population is threatened with a sharp decline. The birthrate has also started to drop. The great majority of emigrants come to England.

It has been said the Irish are like dogs with a bad master. They snarl when he kicks them, but they follow him faithfully. The Irish have followed the English round the world, although there was plenty of room in the past in South America and other Catholic lands. The language question was not that important because a majority of the earlier emigrants spoke Gaelic, not English. Today the largest Gaelic city in the world is said to be Haddensfield in Yorkshire, where so many Irish have migrated from the Gaelic-speaking areas of their country over the last 40 years. Is it a coincidence that the most Irish city in the U.S. is said to be Boston, where Cromwell's fellow Puritans settled and where he himself once entertained thoughts of going?

France. Twenty-two old French ladies had to be murdered by Thierry Paulin, a mulatto from Martinique, before the police nabbed him (Instauration, March 1988). Now it happens that 33 Frenchwomen had to be raped or sexually abused before the French police were able to arrest the perpetrator, Delgado Alcidor Dos Santos, a black from the Cape Verde Islands.

* * *

Jack Lang, who is back as French Minister of Culture after the victory of his good friend, François Mitterrand, celebrated his return by dedicating a statue of Alfred Dreyfus, a racial compère who was the chief figure in France's most famous spy case. The Rosenbergs, Pollard and Dreyfus were all in the same trade, though Dreyfus was officially exonerated. Much money and time have been and will continue to be spent to rehabilitate the Rosenbergs and, more recently, Jonathan Pollard. Will we see statues of these great Semites in Washington in the not too distant future?

The Dreyfus statue is a tasteless, ugly example of Jewish artistic uncouthness and was set up in the Tuileries garden as a "gesture of defiance" to the Front National, which held an overflowing rally there during the recent election campaign.

* * *

Another bow to French Jewry was an official government decree making it a crime to display swastikas, wear Nazi uniforms or flaunt any other Hitler memorabilia.

West Germany. The main thread of the scandalous Nachmann story coming out of the Bundesrepublik was that the 33 million marks ($20 million) embezzlement of Holocaust funds by a Jew would initiate a wave of anti-Semitism. To forestall any such event, the German media tiptoed around the story. Israel denied any responsibility, even though the late Werner Nachmann's wife has a house in the Zionist state and lives there. Brazenly but not unexpectedly, Michael Furst, a leading Jewish notary, tried to absolve his racial cousin by blaming everything on Nachmann's bank, which, he charged, should have kept a closer watch on the transfers of money for Holocaust victims to Nachmann's private enterprises, notably a chain of women's boutiques and a textile processing company. It also turned out that at least one audit of Nachmann had been postponed by orders from "higher-ups."

At Nachmann's funeral last January, Chancellor Helmut Kohl practically idolized the person who had been West Germany's top Jew, calling him a "man who made his mark on the history of the republic by the force of his personality."

It goes without saying that no outbreak of anti-Semitism occurred, one very good reason being that anti-Semitism is against the law in West Germany. In other words, Jews can steal all they want from Jews or from Germans and never be accused of working a racial scam. The situation would be comparable in the U.S. to Congress passing a law that stated the Mafia as such could not be accused of criminal activity; that it was a crime to mention the ethnic background of the organization's members, even though they were all southern Italians or Sicilians.

It may well be that Nachmann stole much more than the 33 million marks he is currently charged with filching. The money came from the 400 million marks ($236 million) that West Germany had appropriated in 1980 as a "last payment" to Holocaust victims -- those who had failed to register for earlier payoffs. A small part of this sum, incidentally, had been allocated to Gypsies.

Shortly before the news broke out about Nachmann, East Germany, which had refused to come up with one pfennig of Holocaust reparations for four decades, relented under pressure of the World Jewish Congress and promised to dole out 100 million marks ($59 million) to "Jewish survivors and their relatives who are in need." Like other members of the Communist bloc, East Germany is desperate for Western trade and, of course, Western loans. As any Eastern European government official knows, the best way to do this is to grease the proper palms. Jews will receive some Communist bloc money and Americans will make the loans, which may or may not ever be repaid. Call this the "new economics."

* * *

Charles Gable, the last chaplain for Rudolf Hess, has written a book, Verbotene Gespräche (Forbidden Conversations), that contains many moving passages, one of the most moving being the one in which the author tells about Hess's collapse when he learns of his impending blindness. One can imagine the impact this news must have had on a man confined in jail for 46 years and one of whose few remaining solaces was reading and watching TV.

Gable was more than a chaplain who came every 14 days to Hess's cell, listened to classical music with Hitler's onetime deputy and held long discussions with him about God and man. Hess's wife, Ilse, and son, Wolf-Rüdiger, were only permitted to see him for a half-hour once each month, and then only in the presence of guards.

Hess's cell was bugged. All his conversations with Gable were recorded and then played back to all four Allied prison governors.

Gable was permitted to walk in the garden with Spandau's only prisoner. There most of the guards, who were under orders to stay close enough to hear every word, turned out to be human and let the two walk alone. Throughout the years there grew a strong, spiritual friendship between the two men.

Nearly everything was forbidden to Hess, Gable writes. He was not permitted to read political news from the press nor see topical news on TV. He could not receive flowers. Salt and other spices were denied him. He was not permitted to shake hands with anyone. "Vous ne pouvez pas me donner le main," said Hess in fluent French as the new chaplain visited him for the first time in February 1977 and offered his extended hand in greeting. Gable commented:

At first I accepted that regulation. But then my wife asked me how I felt as a chaplain if I should continue treating Hess as a number, which he was to his jailers. And so from that day to the next, I changed my attitude towards him. I cannot say Hess was happy about it, because he worried about the consequences for me. The Western guards warned me that the Soviets could interpret it wrongly. None of the Western guards denounced me.

From the beginning Chaplain Gable tried to free Hess from his mental isolation and depression by encouraging him to sound off on the problems of contemporary society. Hess was no prude or reactionary. On the subject of trial marriage, he believed a couple could live some years without a marriage certificate. He admired Margaret Thatcher when Gable told him of her actions in the Falklands conflict. He hoped she would use her influence to set him free. The Iron Lady did try, but had to capitulate, like the heads of other governments, to Soviet revanchism.

Forty-six years in prison did nothing positive for Hess's health. Toward the end of his life, he could only make it up the steep steps to the prison garden with great difficulty. He shook his head in disbelief when he found out that the Allies planned to build an elevator for him that cost almost a million dollars. After the elevator was completed, Hess annoyed his jailers for a considerable time by refusing to use it. Speaking of money, every year it cost the Germans $9.5 million to keep Hess in Spandau.

Hess was permitted to receive letters from home, but they were carefully censored. Gable writes about the humiliations and aggravations, as well as the physical and spiritual suffering of the "ewige Gefangener" (eternal prisoner). Aware of its historical importance, the chaplain tried to loosen Hess's tongue about his sensational flight to England. But Spandau's solitary inmate avoided all answers to such questions. Gable noted, "It is better not to ask any more; let Hess have his secret past and maybe also his secret."

* * *

An estimated 17,700,000 Germans lived in East Prussia, the Sudetenland and other eastern German areas before the Great Exodus. Some 1.1 million died during WWII and two million more were killed during the migration to the west -- possibly the greatest mass displacement of human beings in history.

The enforced Völkerwanderung took place at the time millions of Germans were being held as war prisoners, four million in Russia alone. All in all, in or after WWII, about 30 million Germans were at one time or another removed from their homes and homeland.

The above-mentioned figures are found in From the Ruins of the Reich by Douglas Botting, an Oxford graduate and member of the Royal Institute of International Affairs. Here is a sober English writer educating us with numbers that are virtually unknown. Botting points out that the West German government has "remarkably documented" these events. He offers no explanation as to why the information is known only to specialists.

Elsewhere in his book, Botting recounts the wholesale prostitution of German women for food and other bare necessities of life. He mentions the establishment of feudal fiefdoms by some of the occupation authorities, including the young Henry Kissinger. The widespread plunder of German antiques, art objects and precious metals is reported. An emotional chapter details the British turnover of thousands of Cossacks to the Russians, an act proscribed by international law.

After finishing Botting's book, the reader is left with the indelible impression that Germany paid a bitter, near-Carthagenian price for the National Socialist era. At whatever level one accepts the established view of the Holocaust, there can be no doubt that Germany and Germans collectively suffered an irreplaceable loss of life, wealth and territory. The book adds meat to the theory that the Holocaust was pumped up by Jews not only to denigrate Germans, but to win sympathy -- and shekels -- for the abhorning state of Israel.

Italy. The best defense is a slanderous offense. This seems to be the motto of Italian Jews, who have embarked on a quasi-libelous campaign against the Italian press, and especially the Vatican press, for printing news stories sympathetic to the Palestinians, about 200 of whom have been killed by Israeli soldiers and vigilantes in the last six months or so.

"It's the worst wave of anti-Semitism since Mussolini," clamored Chief Rabbi Elio Toaff of Rome, as he flashed bundles of "hate mail" and alluded to anti-Zionist graffiti littering the Eternal City's walls. As if to spite the rabbi, Italy's Chamber of Deputies passed a resolution backing the PLO by a vote of 191-116, with 133 abstentions -- admittedly not an overwhelmingly favorable vote. The "fear of the Jews" is still very much a factor, as shown by the number of nonvoters. But the vote did demonstrate that at least some of the legislators in one Western country, unlike those in the U.S., are not afraid to speak out against Zionist hyper-racism.

The Vatican, however, was less courageous. The Pope and his retinue of cardinals made no attempt to answer the charge of anti-Semitism leveled at him by the Chief Rabbi and other Italian Jews. In fact, a Vatican spokesman called the Chief Rabbi "a very fair and wise man." It's doubtful that Pope Julius II would have been so wimpish. At about the same time, a conference of Italian churchmen, after asserting that a distinction must be made between Jews and the Israeli government, declared, "Catholics should consider Jews our older brothers in the faith of Abraham." In sum, Catholic clergy in a Catholic country once again spinelessly acquiesced to slanderous accusations made against them by a small non-Christian minority.

The Chief Rabbi didn't mention another reason the Vatican is under Jewish assault. Pope John Paul II will never be forgiven for having had not one but two meetings with Waldheim, the latest being in the course of a papal tour of Austria in June.

Russia. One of the reasons that Boris Yeltsin, the onetime leader of the Communist Party in Moscow, was fired from his post by party boss Mikhail Gorbachev was not, as the press explained, because he complained glasnost was not proceeding fast enough, but because he had received delegates from Pamyat, the anti-Zionist organization, and had later asserted that he thought the group should be given legal status. According to Komsomolskaya Pravda, a party-line organ, Pamyat members see Jewish influence everywhere, from a picture of the moon that is often featured on children's clothing to the six-pointed stars which they allege appear in Soviet newspapers as a camouflaged symbol.

Scare stories about the rise of Russian anti-Semitism are appearing almost daily in the Western "impact" media. Jews, it is claimed, are being pilloried for their financial success in the new cooperatives permitted by the loosening up of Communist economic dogma, which used to forbid privately owned businesses. In addition, a few summer dachas of Moscow Jews have been vandalized, and members of a Jewish club that had rented a meeting hall in the Russian capital arrived to find a leaflet bearing the following statement attached to the locked and barred door.

How long can we tolerate the dirty Jews? Scoundrel Jews are penetrating our society, especially in profitable places. Think about it. How can we allow these dirty ones to make a pile out of our beautiful country? Why do we great, intelligent, beautiful Slavs consider it a normal phenomenon to live with Yids among us? How can these dirty, stinking Jews call themselves by such a heroic and proud name as "Russians"?

Israel. A natural sympathy exists for a pastoral people who have been dispossessed of a land they have inhabited for millennia and who have no inherent quarrel with the U.S., although their plight and suffering is not altogether remarkable as such things go on a global scale. What is unique is the identity of their tormentors. We on this side of the world endure on a different but no less profound scale a state of siege by the same age-old adversary.

As the mood of the Majority as yet precludes emulating the tactics of the Palestinians, we can but watch impotently as they suffer ever greater indignities that have so far included:

- expulsions
- documented instances of mass deaths by gassing
- mass imprisonment in concentration camps
- live burial and catastrophic beatings
- abortions induced by gassing, beatings and stress
- long imprisonment without trial
- torture of prisoners by the Shin Bet (secret police)
- countless shootings by soldiers and vigilantes
- bulldozing of fruit groves and homes
- suppression of reports from domestic and foreign journalists
- attacks on Christian and Moslem places of worship
- invasions of hospitals and the forcible removal of patients
- seizure of West Bank and Gaza lands

Ironically, the magnitude of Palestinian suffering is dwarfed by Israeli actions in the past (before, supposedly, "Israel lost its soul"), which took place with hardly a murmur of American reproval. The more recent Israeli atrocities, however, are finally making it possible for Palestinians to forge a linkage between the reputation of Nazis and Zionists in the public consciousness. In any conversation bemoaning the Holocaust, it is becoming obvious to even the brainwashed American public that the hapless Arabs in Israel and the occupied territories are experiencing one of their own.

The organizers of the uprising have brilliantly assessed the Western media scale of values in weighing Arab versus Jewish lives and have exercised inordinate discipline in channeling and controlling the rage, as manifested in the killing of just two Israelis by Palestinians. We shuddered at the news of the Israeli schoolgirl stoned to death in the West Bank Arab village of Beita, threatening as it did to undo the impact of months of assorted horror stories and the multitude of Palestinian casualties. When the Israeli army revealed that the girl was actually shot by a Jew with a police record extreme even by Israeli standards, the relief was immense. The Israeli settlers, incensed by this needless propaganda loss, had to content themselves with the deportation of eight Beita villagers, the demolition of 14 homes and a criminal charge against the Arab girl who threw the stone at the Israeli who shot her and whose aim was so bad he hit an Israeli girl far out of his line of sight.

The timing of the Palestinian uprising was fortuitous. Its outbreak contaminated what would have been an unalloyed golden stream of media adulation for Israel on its 40th anniversary. By force of circumstance Palestinians are finally changing their image from terrorist to victim. The media have not abandoned Israel, but have taken a much livelier interest in those oppressed by Israel -- to the point of giving front-page space to Mubarak Awad, the Palestinian American recently expelled for working for a Palestinian-Israeli peace pact. The press actually referred to him as the "Palestinian Gandhi." Newspaper cartoonists have been less than gentle to the Zionist brutalizers: One depicted Shamir being chauffeured on a bulldozer and crying words to the effect, "Hurry, I don't want to be late for the sentencing of that war criminal, Demjanjuk."

On a strategic scale, the Arab revolt is having a significant effect. The European Parliament has postponed approval of a number of scheduled economic measures greatly desired by the Israelis. Even the U.S. has periodically felt compelled to bleat a few anemic protestations, sending Secretary of State Shultz doddering about the Middle East. The economic costs to the Israeli military are said to be commensurate with those of the 1982 invasion of Lebanon. There are poignant cries that the repression is having an adverse psychological effect on "the finest military force in the world." The frequent voluntary and enforced absences of Palestinian braceros is costing the Israeli economy millions. Tourism is down. Immigration is slow to stagnant.

All this should add up to the Palestinians' finest hour. But it is a question of endurance and will. The Arabs under the Israeli boot may not have another chance like this for decades. Unfortunately, their struggle for self-determination over the last 50 years betrays a lack of staying power. Had the PLO exercised a supreme act of will and fought in Beirut until the last man, it would have given Palestinian morale an unprecedented boost in the fight for freedom and nationhood.

Arabs point complacently to the fact that it took them a hundred years to rid Palestine of the Crusaders. They may have to wait that long to get rid of their present invaders. Arab nations might speed the day by unilaterally declaring peace, unconditional recognition and friendship with Israel. The "menace" to Israel would vanish overnight. Puncturing the myth of an embattled Zion would make the colossal transfers of American treasure and arms more difficult to get through Congress. Without the Masada syndrome that unifies Israeli society, the cultural divisions between European and Middle Eastern Jews, Orthodox and more secular Jews, would move to the forefront and might well deteriorate into a Jewish civil war. Under such circumstances it is difficult to see how Israel could survive.

The end times would come by evaporation, not annihilation. Barring this, current Palestinian tactics are the wisest alternative.

The struggle against ZOG in Palestine is akin to our own in the West. It has already provided an invaluable service in helping to lower the alleged moral superiority of the Jews. A toast to the "Intifada." Long may it boil or simmer!

* * *

Mention the word gas and the ordinary Westerner, after 40 years of Jewish coaching, will automatically think of the Holocaust. But what about the gassing not of Jews but by Jews? UN observers say that at least 11 Palestinians have died and some 1,285 have been treated for breathing problems as a result of a new lethal tear gas -- made in the USA -- that not only causes noses to burn and eyes to weep, but kills when sprayed in a closed space. One of the Palestinian dead, according to relatives, was a three-year-old Arab girl who became eyeless in Gaza. Will the Beverly Hills crowd turn her into a Palestinian Anne Frank? Not bloody likely.

Nor will Time and Newsweek readers hear much of Nora, the 24-year-old noticeably pregnant Palestinian who was beaten by Israeli soldiers wielding truncheons. They struck her deliberately and repeatedly in the stomach. The dead fetus was removed in a hospital.

Nor will the world know much of Yasmine, age 5, who suffered severe burns all over her body when Israeli soldiers broke into her family's West Bank home and threw a pot of boiling water on her. They then turned their truncheons on her mother, warning her that even worse would happen if she told anyone about what they had done to her child.

And all the time that the People of the Book were busy doing their dirty business in the Compromised Land, the American TV audience was treated night after night to fourth-run Holocaust and anti-German movies; millions of taxpayer dollars continued to flow each day into Israel; and not one politician rose up in Congress and had the guts to cry "enough!" What a miserable figure the 20th-century U.S. is going to cut in history books! God bless America, the paymaster of barbarism.

* * *

Israel's Institute for Intelligence and Special Services, a.k.a. Mossad, has been operating a Murder Incorporated, according to British officials. The plan is to kill Arab activists in England and make it look like the hit was an inside job by rival Arab factions. A huge Israeli arms cache was uncovered by investigators searching for the killer of Ali ad-Adhan, a Palestinian cartoonist gunned down in London a year ago. British police are pointing the finger at Mossad for this deed, especially after the Jewish KGB proved it was deep in the assassination business with the recent murder of Abu Jihad, the second-in-command of the PLO, in Tunis.

The Pollard spy case in the U.S., secret operations in Britain, attempted sabotage of an Austrian presidential election, creeping genocide in the West Bank and Gaza. Verily, the Jews are a Chosen People -- in the sense that the world chooses to let them get away with every crime in the book.

* * *

Israel may have a huge nuclear arsenal and, consequently, is by far the strongest military power in the Middle East, said Knesset member Matti Peled in a speech last year. But Arab states, he warned, also have weapons of mass destruction. Peled reported that each month Iraq produces 60 tons of mustard gas and four tons each of the nerve gases "sarin" and "tabun." For this very good reason, Peled suggested that his country should no longer refuse to join Egypt in calling for the establishment of a nuclear free zone in the Middle East.

Poison gas in missile warheads is the only means that the Arab and Moslem nations have at the present time of neutralizing Israel's nuclear capability. Let Israel junk its fission (and perhaps fusion) bombs and the Arabs will trash their chemical weapons. It sounds like a mutually beneficial arrangement. But millions of Arabs and Jews may die in the Middle East someday because Israel neurotically refuses to go along.

Japan. To combat Japan's recent outpouring of anti-Semitic books, 1% of all book sales in the country in 1987, Eve Kaplan, who resides in Tokyo, founded the International Committee for Cross-Cultural Relations. (How clever they are at names!) After a spate of B'nai B'rith-type "monitoring," Kaplan persuaded Japanese publishers to revise their dictionaries by removing such definitions of Jew as "miserly," "pawnbrokers" and "stingy." Two-thirds of the 105 Japanese dictionaries she surveyed contained such synonyms.

In agreeing to make the changes, one Japanese publisher said that the definitions had originally been copied from older Western dictionaries.

New Zealand. If you are writing to a friend in Wellington, you can put Whanganui-a-Tara instead of the English name of New Zealand's capital on your envelope and the letter will be delivered. Aucklanders now live in Tamaki-Makau-Rau. It's apparent at least in the eyes of the New Zealand postal service that the Maori language, spoken by 300,000 of the country's 3.3 million inhabitants, is making a comeback.

No Bulldozer in Cleveland -- Yet

There is still some fight left in the Demjanjuk family. Father John has been given the death penalty in a juryless Jerusalem trial presided over by Nuremberg-type judges, one of whom is an old Irgun mobster. He was sentenced to hang in a country that didn't exist at the time of the alleged crime and by an ex post facto Gilbert and Sullivan law.

Edward Nishnic, who has nearly bankrupted himself trying to defend his father-in-law, has filed an omnibus suit against the U.S. District Attorney in Cleveland, the INS, Neal Sher of the OSI, Allan A. Ryan Jr., founding father of the OSI, and, last but not least, that most popular of all political punching bags, ex-Attorney General Edwin Meese III, the sleazy pal of supersleazy Irving Wallach.

Nishnic charges all the above with fraud and deceit in persuading judges to strip Demjanjuk of his U.S. citizenship and deport him to Israel. Even if Nishnic should win his suit, which he won't, it would do the aging death-row prisoner in Jerusalem little good. Demjanjuk's appeal comes up in December. It's possible the sentence could be committed to life -- as a public relations gesture. But it's almost certain John Demjanjuk will die in Israel, either from old age or at the end of a rope.

Having killed more than 200 mostly young Palestinians in the last six months or so, Israelis are most anxious to add a septuagenarian Ukrainian-born auto worker to the death toll. Despite all that has happened to their paterfamilias, Demjanjuk's relations should be thankful to the Israelis, at least for one thing. They haven't yet ordered a spineless U.S. Congress to allow them to come to Cleveland and bulldoze the Nishnic home.

Ethnic Stirrings

The Nishnics are not the only ones going after Israelis and their American Nazi-hunting stooges. The National Confederation of American Ethnic Groups is petitioning Congress to abolish the Office of Special Investigations, which operates as a sort of Jewish KGB and actually works hand-in-glove with the Russian KGB in slandering and criminalizing American citizens of Eastern European extraction. The petition forms may be obtained by writing to NCAEG, 788 Ridge St., Newark, NJ 07104.

Seedbeds of Disease

Syphilis burst upon the world early in the 16th century in somewhat the same frightful way that AIDS made its dramatic debut in the late 20th. It was first called the "French disease" by an Italian who wrote about it in a scary Latin poem. Others have tried to pretend that Columbus and his crew brought it to the New World -- an old wives' tale that has gained some credibility through the anti-European labors of the minority-skewed media.

The facts are otherwise. Syphilis was well known in the New World long before Columbus waded ashore on a Bahamian beach. As the Encyclopaedia Britannica (IX, 743) says, the disease was "found in the skeletal remains of pre-Columbian Indians." In his book, Great Medical Disasters (Dorset Press, 1983), Dr. Richard Gordon writes, "Columbus's sailors . . . picked it up in Haiti."

Is history repeating? Some authorities say that AIDS was "picked up" by traveling American fags from Haitian male prostitutes, who came down with the disease as a result of contact with infected "brothers" from black Africa. Delving still further, one or two medical researchers claim that African Negroes may have been infected by monkeys, as a result of sexual behavior that is too disgusting to describe.

The origin and spread of AIDS and syphilis are powerful arguments against the intermingling of races. Strange that no one, at least to Instauration's knowledge, has ever brought up that all-important point in the millions upon millions of words that have been written about those two hideous diseases.

Witness Pressuring

For testifying for the defense in the Zündel trial, Bill Armontrout, the warden of the Missouri State Penitentiary, got himself into a heap of trouble. Since his prison has a "two-seater" gas chamber which has not been used since 1965, but is now being "reconstituted," Armontrout was asked how it worked. After a few minutes on the stand, he made it obvious that execution by gas is a tricky business, necessitating so many precautions that it would have been absolutely impossible for the Nazis to have exterminated even a small fraction of the millions that Holocausters are sure were done in by Zyklon B. Thirty-eight people, Armontrout explained, were involved in the operation of the Missouri gas chamber, which had massive steel doors, heavy bolts, thick glass and a huge 45-foot-high evacuation pump.

These unpalatable truths were very displeasing to the mythomaniac Jewish Defense League and its "investigator," one Jan Tucker. A full explanation was demanded of Armontrout. By the time the JDL got the media into the act, he was made to look like some kind of Midwestern cornball Nazi.

Talk about chilling effects! Liberals are always grumbling about being "chilled" if anyone for any reason stops them from uttering lib-min clichés. They keep insisting that Americans must have complete freedom to say whatever is on their minds, provided, of course, what is on their minds has a "liberal" slant. But when a goonish group like the JDL deliberately seeks to embarrass, humiliate and scare an expert witness for standing up and testifying about what he knows of some operation or another, the media are unchilled.

Instauration believes the JDL campaign against Armontrout is an attempt to obstruct justice, not just by threatening a witness for testimony already given, but by warning future witnesses not to say anything that might puncture the Six Million myth.

Arab-American Backlash

Arab Americans are finally getting off their duffs and refusing to let Jewish Americans ride roughshod over them on Middle East policy. Three billboards in Minneapolis blared forth in huge letters, PALESTINIANS ARE NOT TERRORISTS — U.S.A. FOR PEACE. Some smaller and less dramatic posters proclaimed, SAVE THE CHILDREN OF PALESTINE.

In no time the complaints started rolling in, as might be expected in a country where free speech and the First Amendment do not apply to those who dare to criticize the bone-breaking working-over Israelis give their subjugated Palestinians.

The three billboards were taken down "temporarily." The arguments of the censors were disingenuous. The principal complaint was that one billboard had been "defaced" with anti-Israeli graffiti. But why were all three taken down when only one contained forbidden words?

In Washington (DC), the American-Arab Anti-Discrimination Committee is planning to start a poster campaign in the subway system. The posters, if they ever manage to get up (and stay up), will have a photo of the U.S. Capitol with the words, "Capitol Hill: Another Israeli-Occupied Territory." The payoffs of pro-Israeli groups to congressmen will be listed, as will the amount of tribute ($3 billion a year officially, millions more unofficially) taxpayers are forced to give each year to the present masters of the "only democracy in the Middle East."

Any bets that these posters will ever make it?

A New White Minority

When they sit down and play the minority game, blacks want to be the only ones at the table. Unfortunately, however, where there's a racket going on, there's bound to be more than one set of racketeers. Louisiana's Cajuns may not be black, but they're not WASPs. So why shouldn't they be cut in on the affirmative action scam? Accordingly, they put the ethnic squeeze on the Louisiana House of Representatives, and the invertebrate pols, feeling the heat, promptly voted to give minority status to the descendants of the Frenchmen kicked out of Acadia by the British way back in the 1750s.

Along with blacks and other assorted Louisiana nonwhites, Cajuns will now be in line for quicker promotions, low-interest loans, academic scholarships and various other unconstitutional perks that the Supreme Court has endorsed -- all at the expense of the Majority. Needless to say, Louisiana Negroes fought the proposal tooth and claw. They've got a great thing going and they don't want to share it with anyone -- just as kidnappers don't want to share ransom money with someone who muscled in on the body-snatching at the last minute.

To become law, the "Cajun bill" had to be signed by Governor Buddy Roemer. He signed. In the old days, Louisiana Negroes didn't have many rights. In these days, as the dispossession of the Majority gathers steam, whites don't have as many rights as Negroes. Historical retribution, poetic justice or political idiocy? Ironically, the Cajuns, themselves white, although often of a dark hue, are the latest group to throw sand in the gears of white racial unity.

How about British-descended Americans being the next in line for affirmative action? They, too, are a minority (about 30% of the population) and they, too, are being discriminated against. What a silly question. All the WASPs seem capable of doing nowadays is sitting back and stinging themselves.

E Pluribus Negrostan

Although it is the only real solution, an independent black state or states in the U.S. will probably remain an unrealized dream unless and until the country dissolves into chaos. Unfortunately, at this moment in time, racial integration and its accompanying pathology are going great guns.

What will more civil rights, more affirmative action and more integration do for Negro betterment? Very little, says Harold Cruise, an owlish black professor, whose recent book, Plural But Equal (Morrow, 1988), snakes a middle path between the small number of Negro separatists and the huge mass of Negro integrationists.

Cruise believes that Negroes and the "talented tenth" who lead them (or should lead them) ought to stop worrying about their rights and start worrying about their place in the economic sun. In what a few years ago would have been considered the worst form of Uncle Tomism, Cruise actually tries to rehabilitate Booker T. Washington, who preached the gospel of Negro self-sufficiency and cared less about desegregated classrooms and lunch counters.

Cruise wants to see a Negro economy operating within the national economy, an economy backed up by a Negro political party, which would cut its strings to the Democrats and be free to support anyone or anything that would conceivably advance the Negro cause. The word "plural" in the book's title stands for economic and political separatism, not the physical or geographical kind.

How would whites be affected if Cruise's words became flesh? Any program that promotes the separation of races -- all races -- would benefit Majority members, who are now under what the disheartened among us might call a racial siege. A dynamic Negro political party, instead of serving as an electoral appendage of the Democratic Party, would strengthen the Republican Party, if only by default. On the other hand, Republicans and Democrats might start a bidding contest to win Negro support, which would inevitably lead to a vote-buying orgy that would sell out the whites of both parties.

As any intelligent pol knows in his heart, but unfortunately not in his tongue, there are no political and economic solutions to Negro backwardness. In a high-tech world blacks fall further and further behind because they need higher IQs just to keep up. And the average Negro IQ of 85 (15 points below the white average) is almost certain to sink even lower as the less intelligent Negroes in the inner cities continue to do most of the Negro mating and most of the Negro breeding.

Cruise should be felicitated for his hard-wired approach to relieving the plight of his inner-city brothers. He is definitely more realistic than most other black thinkers, who have been preaching the pie-in-the-sky gospel of what Cruise calls "non-economic liberalism." Someday, though, he and other realistic society-savers, white and black, will have to admit that only upbreeding and genetic engineering will bring the Negro up to snuff, to the mental capabilities demanded of the ordinary citizen in this ever more complex world. Until that fact is on the table, all talk of Negro improvement will be full of sound and fury, signifying zilch.

Civil Rights or Civil Wrongs?

How many Americans saw the irony in Congress's recently enacted (over the President's veto) "Civil Rights Restoration Act"? A true "restoration" would restore the following Ninth and Tenth Amendment rights and powers:

- The right of the people of the states to determine the policies governing their schools.
- The right to determine to whom they will sell, lease or rent their privately-owned housing.
- The right to a job or promotion unencumbered by federally dictated minority quotas or "goals."
- The right to determine who will be served in privately owned restaurants, hotels, motels, bars, theaters and other businesses.

All of the foregoing rights were exercised by the American people when they adopted the Constitution in 1788. That once-honored document conveyed no authority to the federal government to abridge those rights. It must be presumed, therefore, that these rights, defined as "others retained by the people," were protected from federal violation.

Citizens should challenge federal implementation of civil rights policies on the grounds that these "laws" violate the Ninth and Tenth Amendments. Challenges should be made in both federal district courts and in the political arena -- in the latter area by means of numerous referenda. Those politicians who oppose direct votes on these issues should be exposed as collaborators in tyranny.

431

Polish-American Gadfly

Joseph Mlot-Mroz is a Polish American who has been arrested so many times that jail has become his second home. His crimes have been to exercise his right to protest. But Mlot-Mroz doesn't protest against South Africa, Chile or the Contras. He goes after much more dangerous game -- Communists and Jews. Although his anti-Jewish and anti-Communist stance is quite reasonable, in view of what the Russians and the Jews have done to his former homeland over the centuries, the powers-that-be and the powers-that-will-continue-to-be have the habit of treating him as a raging, foaming-at-the-mouth anti-Semite, which means it's off to jail with him almost every time he opens his mouth. It's safe to say that Mlot-Mroz, despite his very wise and very unpopular distrust of glasnost, would have had very few run-ins with the law if he had concentrated his fire and ire on the Soviet Union alone.

The embattled Pole proudly boasts he has participated in at least 800 demonstrations in the U.S. and four in Poland during the German occupation of his homeland. For the latter he was arrested twice and spent 21 months in a Nazi concentration camp. He's been jailed 70 times in the land of the free and the home of the liberal-minority coalition.

Currently Mlot-Mroz is president of the Polish Freedom Fighters of the USA, an organization which claims 1,696 members. His mailing address is 18 Broadman St., Salem, MA 01970. Give the guy a tip of the hat.

Dixie Flag-Waver

In Garner (NC), inarguably a Southern town, ninth-grader Mark Vice Jr. was sent home from school -- not because he had neglected to do his homework or had sassed his teacher or had disrupted the class, but because he had shown up one day with the Confederate flag sewn on the back of his denim jacket. As a parting shot, Superintendent Janet Stevens ordered Mark not to come back to school until his apparel was sans Stars and Bars.

This act of Dr. Stevens, typical of the arrogance of school superintendents, so brazenly deprived the student of his rights that even a local member of the ACLU and the local media were obliged to urge more tolerance. It was obvious, even to a Jacksonian liberal (Jesse Jackson, that is), that Stevens was kowtowing to the black students, whose racism was being fired up by their parents and Negro lobbies.

Tolerance, for a change, won one. Before the summer vacation started, Mark was back in school and so was his flag. In no time a dozen other Confederate flags appeared on other jackets. Although 30% of the students are black, no violence has been reported to date. Try as she might, Superintendent Stevens has found no excuse to deprive white kids of one of the few remaining symbols of what may have been -- compared to what is to come -- a golden age.

Solomon Redux

After 18-year-old Debra Foster, one of those kids who have kids, abandoned her two young pickaninnies in a non-air-conditioned room in the 100° Arizona heat for almost three days, they hovered on the edge of death. While in jail waiting sentencing for child abuse, she gave birth to a baby girl.

Her sentence was Solomonic. No more jail time for Debra, ordered Judge Lindsay Budzyn. Instead he ruled that she practice birth control for the duration of her fertile years. The judge's closing words: "Your case represents the epitome of what is wrong with our society."

Not the epitome, judge. The epitome is the mother who brings her illegitimate brood into the world with AIDS.

Nailed by His Genes

Tommy Lee Andrews is a rapist who will go down in legal history. He is the first to be convicted by genetic evidence. His DNA was compared with the DNA in the rapist's semen and the match matched.

Two years ago Andrews broke into the home of a 25-year-old Orlando (FL) white woman, raped her three times and stabbed her before he departed. The victim recovered but had to have an abortion. Since the criminal was given a sentence of 75 years, the district attorney decided to drop, at least temporarily, two other rape charges against Andrews, who was a suspect in the forcible violation of 19 women.

Andrews, a black, was sentenced in June, two years after he practically destroyed the life of the Orlando woman. Rape leaves a long, tormenting, indelible imprint. No doubt there are some legal schlockmeisters already plotting an appeal in which this new genetic test, even more accurate than fingerprinting, will be called imprecise and untrustworthy.

Straws in the Wind

• A Daily News poll of Northwest Philadelphians, who live in one of the few remaining white sections of the City of Brotherly Despair, demonstrated the overwhelming desire of white residents to secede from the metropolitan jungle and establish a new and independent city. As one would-be secessionist explained, "Philadelphia will never have another white mayor. Whites will never again be able to be free in their city."

Northeast Philadelphia has a population of some 412,000, 9,500 of whom are black. If the Northeasterners are excluded, Philadelphia, now about half-black, would be preponderantly black.

Since a formal secession is a practical political impossibility at this time although the Pennsylvania Senate has approved the idea, Philadelphia whites will doubtlessly continue to secede informally by the very effective, albeit painful and expensive, method of taking off en masse for suburbia and ruralia.

• While blacks in the South are busy trying to obliterate all the remaining symbols of the Confederacy, whites in most cases are running for cover and letting the Negroes have their way. Not in Alabama, where Governor Guy Hunt still manages to keep the Confederate flag fluttering high over the state capitol in Montgomery and even dared to arrest a high Negro muckamuck who tried to pull it down. In Oklahoma, Governor Henry Bellmon, equally gutsy, signed into law a bill that requires the Confederate flag to fly over the state capitol. But there are always the weak at heart. The city government of Franklin (TN) ordered the Confederate flag removed from policemen's uniforms and patrol cars. As for ex-segregationist and neo-equalitarian George Wallace, he called the Confederate flag flying over the Alabama state house, "a tourist gimmick," adding, "I don't have any feelings about it."

Ponderable Quote

History would be a wonderful thing -- if it were only true.

Leo Tolstoy

MONKEYSHINE MARATHON

“IF WE WIN THIS CASE, we’ll be the biggest niggers in New York.” So crowed Rev. Al Sharpton, a onetime FBI informer, to his inner circle of con artists, as he clued them in on the interminable Tawana Brawley soap opera being staged in Wappingers Falls (NY) and the national media. But the title was not to be theirs because a Sharpton flunky named Perry McKinnon finally spilled the beans, after passing lie detector tests with high marks. It was obvious even to the pusillanimous Mario Cuomo that the trio of Tawana’s advisers, Sharpton and lawyers Alton Maddox Jr. and C. Vernon Mason, had overplayed their hands and that the real miscreants in the Brawley case were not some alleged white rapists, but Tawana’s self-appointed ebony Svengalis.

Every veteran or even novice Instaurationist knew the story was 100% malarkey the moment it broke last winter. A black girl in a small town, sodomized and raped over several days by half a dozen white men, one a cop, then left in a bag with dog feces smeared on her face and the words “nigger bitch” and “KKK” scrawled across her body? Give us a break! We’ve been reading about similar hoaxes in the back pages of Instauration for more than a decade now, and they always are just that -- hoaxes.

Month after month, we wanted to comment on the affair, but kept waiting for Governor Cuomo or some other official to come to his senses and expose Sharpton’s game for what it was -- one more irresponsible black adventure into racial politics. We waited in vain.

Even after McKinnon squealed and another black confirmed his squealing, the media continued to treat the story as if it had a kernel of truth. Almost nothing is heard nationally about black activist Roy Innes’s investigation of the case or his conclusion that the story is a hoax. Innes pointed out that, although Tawana had been away from home for three days, her mother only reported her missing 15 minutes after she had been found. When Mrs. Brawley sought sanctuary in a church to escape a 30-day jail sentence for refusing to testify before a grand jury, police were ordered not to go in and arrest her. Cuomo was afraid to stir up blacks. This is the man who might have been president if he had chosen to run.

A little item in the Washington Post (Feb. 28, 1988) told of a 50-year-old black woman named Hildegard Smith of Newton (NJ), who claimed that she too had been attacked by two white men -- sho’ nuff -- who smeared her with feces, painted markings on her face and clipped her hair. The local cops speculated it was a “copycat attack” based on the Brawley case, but, for all they know, doped up black women may be making similar allegations somewhere in America every day. The freaky thing about Wappingers Falls was that the insightful locals quickly lost control of their racial hysteria case to the ravaging Zoo City press. (Since we never heard another word about the Newton woman, it is certain that her hoax was immediately laid to rest.)

Certain papers also noted in passing that one of Tawana Brawley’s own black classmates had told the same tale of gang rape by white males just a year or two earlier. Actually, this pattern of racial fabrication was the only real story to come out of the Tawana smelldrama.

For months, New Yorkers suffered the sorry spectacle of their governor and other top officials being “haunted” by the case, losing sleep over its “moral complexities,” and so on. State Attorney General Robert Abrams was said to be letting it eat up his free evenings and weekends, even as Brawley’s advisers were using press conferences to call him a “sexual pervert [who] masturbated while looking at Tawana Brawley’s picture.”

Typically, the media would speak of “this savage crime” shortly after describing Tawana’s sum total of injuries as “one small bruise.” And they let Brawley’s black brain trusters tell the nation anything they pleased. As of late June, attorney Mason was still saying over the radio that “medical tests” had detected “five different types of sperm” on his client’s body. Of course, every medical examiner in the area had declared from the beginning that there was no evidence whatsoever of rape or sexual crime.

The Brawley case threw a spotlight on New York State’s Negro community which revealed one crook, con artist and charlatan after another. To take one example among many, William West was the black investigator on Robert Abrams’s Tawana Brawley Task Force -- until his suspension April 6 for selling cocaine to an undercover cop. Sharpton himself, a minister without a church, has admitted that he has not filed a tax return for several years. He is now under investigation by the Internal Revenue Service.

Any group of whites who defied, ridiculed and trampled on the law as have the Brawley family and its advisers would have had the book thrown at it by mid-January at the latest. The media would have muted the group’s monkeyshines, not magnified them. But the Brawleys are black, as their booster, William Kunstler, noted in June, so it doesn’t really matter if whites attacked Tawana or if the whole thing is a hoax. “The thing is on a larger plane now. It’s not a legal issue; it’s a political issue.” For Kunstler, “The big issue is the fairness of the criminal justice system toward black people. That is the real issue and not Tawana herself.”

The hero of Wappingers Falls and surrounding, 7%-black Dutchess County is Charlie McClusky, publisher and editor of the hard-nosed Hudson Valley Hornet. “The statistical truth,” says McClusky to anyone who will listen, “is that black people, over the past ten years, have committed nearly 90% of all violent crimes in Dutchess County.”

(A white minority member, Mary Deuks, tried to pull the same stunt as Tawana at the University of Minnesota. After attending and cheering a campus rally against “sexual violence,” she claimed a man named Craig had punched her, stabbed her and held her at gunpoint, not once but on four separate occasions. The police spent hundreds of hours investigating, only to come to the conclusion that the person who had attacked Mary was Mary.)

Ponderable Quote

Almighty God hath created the mind free, and manifested his supreme will that free it shall remain by making it altogether insusceptible of restraint; that all attempts to influence it by temporal punishments, or burthens, or by civil incapacitations, tend only to beget habits of hypocrisy and meanness

Thomas Jefferson